Entering the Dark Valley. By the Author of the Evangelical Rambler [i.e. Timothy East]. Timothy East, 1825 Dark Companions of Stars P. Kamp, 2012-12-06 If you want to understand the invisible look careful at the visible The Talmud A bird's eye or rather a distant spacecraft's view of the solar system reveals an assembly of planets terrestrial giant and Pluto The orbital motions are in the same sense counter clockwise as seen from the north of the general flattened space within which the planetary motions are confined This state of affairs is corevolving and more or less coplanar The rotations are in the same sense as the revolutions with the striking exception of Uranus whose sense of rotation is perpendicular to its plane of revolution As time goes by most of the planets remain fairly close to a general plane and at no time stray unduly far from it they remain confined within a rather narrow box or disk with a large equatorial extent The most distant planet Pluto requires a diameter of some 80 astronomical units for the disk One astronomical unit is the distance of the Earth to the Sun to be more precise the length of half the major axis of the Earth's slightly elliptical orbit around the Sun and amounts to nearly 149600000 km

Dark Tower series is also significant in its cross references to King's other works ranging from overt connections like characters or places to more subtle allusions like the sigil of the Dark Tower's Crimson King appearing in the graffiti of other realities. This book examines these connections and genre influences to consider how King negotiates and transforms these elements, why they matter, and the impact they have on one another and on King's work as a whole. The Dark Star

Robert William Chambers, 2020-09-28 As long as she could remember she had been permitted to play with the contents of the late Herr Conrad Wilner's wonder box. The programme on such occasions varied little: the child was permitted to rummage among the treasures in the box until she had satisfied her perennial curiosity; conversation with her absent-minded father ensued, which ultimately included a personal narrative dragged out piecemeal from the reticent, dreamy invalid. Then always a few pages of the diary kept by the late Herr Wilner were read as a bedtime story. And bath and bed and dreamland followed. That was the invariable routine, now once more in full swing. Her father lay on his invalid's chair, reading his rubber-shod crutches rested against the wall within easy reach. By him, beside the kerosene lamp, her mother sat mending her child's stockings and underwear. Outside the circle of lamplight the incandescent eyes of the stove glowed steadily through the semi-dusk, and the child, always fascinated by anything that aroused her imagination, lifted her gaze furtively from time to time to convince herself that it really was the big familiar stove which glared redly back at her, and not a dragon into which her creative fancy had so often transformed it. Reassured, she continued to explore the contents of the wonder box, a toy she preferred to her doll but not to her beloved set of water colours and crayon pencils. Some centuries ago Pandora's box let loose a world of troubles. Herr Wilner's box apparently contained only pleasure for a little child whose pleasures were mostly of her own invention. It was a curious old box made of olive wood and bound with bands of some lacquered silvery metal to make it strong; rupee silver, perhaps, strangely wrought with Arabic characters engraved and in shallow relief. It had handles on either side like a sea chest, a silver lacquered lock and hasp which retained traces of violent usage, and six heavy strap hinges of the same lacquered metal. Within it the little child knew that a most fascinating collection of articles was to be discovered, taken out one by one with greatest care, played with discreetly, and at her mother's command returned to their several places in Herr Wilner's box. There were in this box two rather murderous-looking Kurdish daggers in sheaths of fretted silver, never to be unsheathed; it was solemnly understood, except by the child's father, that there was a pair of German army revolvers of the pattern of 1900, the unexploded cartridges of which had long since been extracted and cautiously thrown into the mill pond by the child's mother, much to the surprise, no doubt, of the pickerel and sunfish. My
