Out of body out of time Though basically a skeptic William Reynolds had known out of body experiences in the past But never before had he floated past the boundaries of Baltimore and across the borders of time And now with the fires of Civil War looming on the horizon the astonished graduate student was hobnobbing with none other than the dark poet Edgar Allan Poe But their meeting of minds was to have chilling consequences For a desperate Confederacy planned to use them both to remold the world and to change history for the worse Fishing for Dreams D. Antoine Laurent Lavoisier who introduced a modern nomenclature and a definitive text Kim argues that chemical affinity was erased from historical memory by Lavoisier's omission of it from his textbook She examines the work of many less famous French chemists including physicians apothecaries metallurgists philosophical chemists and industrial chemists to explore the institutional context of chemical instruction and research the social stratification that shaped theoretical discourse and the crucial shifts in analytic methods Apothecaries and metallurgists she shows shaped the main theory domains through their innovative approach to analysis Academicians and philosophical chemists brought about two transformative theoretical moments through their efforts to create a rational discourse of chemistry in tune with the reigning natural philosophy The topics discussed include the corpuscular Cartesian model in French chemistry in the early 1700s the stabilization of the theory domains of composition and affinity the reconstruction of French theoretical discourse in the middle of the eighteenth century the Newtonian languages that plagued the domain of affinity just before the Chemical Revolution Guyton de Morveau's program of affinity chemistry Lavoisier's reconstruction of the theory domains of chemistry and Berthollet's path as an affinity chemist
