The Higher Education Of Women:

The Higher Education of Women Emily Davies, 2020-09-28 IN any inquiry of a practical nature intended to lead to some definite course of action it is obviously necessary to start with a tolerably clear idea of the end in view the object for which it is proposed to provide In the case of education definitions more or less satisfactory have already so often been given that it might seem superfluous to go into the question again As a matter of practice however it is found that when it is attempted to apply the received definitions of the general objects of education to the case of women they are usually questioned or modified if not altogether set aside When for instance Mr Maurice tells us that the end of education itself is as it has always been considered to form a nation of living orderly men the definition will be accepted with the tacit reservation that it applies only to men in the exclusive sense of the word and has nothing to do with the education of women Again when Milton in his treatise on Education lays down that the end of learning is to repair the ruin of our first parents by regaining to know God aright and out of that knowledge to love Him to imitate Him to be like Him the language might be taken in a general sense and when he goes on to define a complete and generous education as that which fits a man to perform justly skilfully and magnanimously all the offices both private and public of peace and war the words might still perhaps bear a common interpretation but as soon as he comes to describing in detail how all this may be done between twelve and one and twenty it becomes evident that he is thinking of boys only In the most recent writers the tendency to regard general theories of education as applying exclusively to that of men is quite as strongly marked It seems therefore that in attempting to treat of female education it is necessary once more to ask what we are aiming at and to obtain if possible a clear understanding and agreement as to the end in view What ought the educators of girls to be trying to make of them What is the ideal towards which they ought to direct their efforts the end to be desired as the result of their labours The Higher Education of Women, 1973 The Rise of Women in Higher Education Gary A. Berg, 2019-11-28 The story of the American university in the past half century is about the rise of women in participation as students faculty members college athletes and in subsequently changing the overall university culture for the better Now almost sixty percent of the overall college student population in America is female and still growing By the year 2000 women surpassed men worldwide in attendance at higher education institutions At the same time after years of a disproportionate dominant male professoriate female faculty members are now becoming the majority of university professors While top university presidents are still largely male women have achieved real gains in the overall administrative ranks and trustee positions In all areas of the university disparities still exist in terms of compensation and balance in key areas of the academy but the overall positive trend is clear Few to this date have recognized and chronicled this extraordinary change in college education one of society's fundamental and influential institutions For universities the test for the future is to make the changes needed in broad areas within higher education from financial aid to curriculum student activities and overall campus culture in order to better foster a newly
