The Scottish Historical Review, 1908 A new series of the Scottish antiquary established 1886 Island Biogeography Robert J. Whittaker, Jose Maria Fernandez-Palacios, 2006-11-30 Island biogeography is the study of the distribution and dynamics of species in island environments Due to their isolation from more widespread continental species islands are ideal places for unique species to evolve but they are also places of concentrated extinction Not surprisingly they are widely studied by ecologists conservationists and evolutionary biologists alike There is no other recent textbook devoted solely to island biogeography and a synthesis of the many recent advances is now overdue This second edition builds on the success and reputation of the first documenting the recent advances in this exciting field and explaining how islands have been used as natural laboratories in developing and testing ecological and evolutionary theories In addition the book describes the main processes of island formation development and eventual demise and explains the relevance of island environmental history to island biogeography The authors demonstrate the huge significance of islands as hotspots of biodiversity and as places from which disproportionate numbers of species have been extinguished by human action in historical time Many island species are today threatened with extinction and this work examines both the chief threats to their persistence and some of the mitigation measures that can be put in play with conservation strategies tailored to islands

New Lands Within the Arctic Circle Julius Payer, 2023-07-21 Building a New Biocultural Synthesis Alan H. Goodman, Thomas Leland Leatherman, 2010-03-23 Anthropology with its dual emphasis on biology and culture is or should be the discipline most suited to the study of the complex interactions between these aspects of our lives Unfortunately since the early decades of this century biological and cultural anthropology have grown distinct and a holistic vision of anthropology has suffered This book brings culture and biology back together in new and refreshing ways Directly addressing earlier criticisms of biological anthropology Building a New Biocultural Synthesis concerns how culture and political economy affect human biology e.g. people's nutritional status the spread of disease exposure to pollution and how biological consequences might then have further effects on cultural social and economic systems Contributors to the volume offer case studies on health nutrition and violence among prehistoric and historical peoples in the Americas theoretical chapters on nonracial approaches to human variation and the development of critical humanistic and political ecological approaches in biocultural anthropology and explorations of biological conditions in contemporary societies in relationship to global changes Building a

New Biocultural Synthesis will sharpen and enrich the relevance of anthropology for understanding a wide variety of struggles to cope with and combat persistent human suffering. It should appeal to all anthropologists and be of interest to sister disciplines such as nutrition and sociology. Alan H Goodman is Professor of Anthropology Hampshire College. Thomas L Leatherman is Associate Professor of Anthropology University of South Carolina. Families of the Missing Simon Robins, 2013-05-29. Families of the Missing interrogates the current practice of transitional justice from the viewpoint of the families of those disappeared and missing as a result of conflict and political violence. Studying the needs of families of the missing in two contexts: Nepal and Timor Leste, the practice of transitional justice is seen to be rooted in discourses that are alien to predominantly poor and rural victims of violence and that are driven by elites with agendas that diverge from those of the victims. In contrast to the legalist orientation of the global transitional justice project, victims do not see judicial process as a priority. Rather, they urgently seek an answer concerning the fate of the missing and to retrieve human remains. As important are livelihood issues where families are struggling to cope with the loss of breadwinners and seek support to ensure economic security. Although rights are the product of a discourse that claims to be global and universal, needs are necessarily local and particular, the product of culture and context. And it is from this perspective that this volume seeks both to understand the limitations of transitional justice processes in addressing the priorities of victims and to provide the basis of an emancipatory victim-centred approach to transitional justice.
