The Economics of Smoking Robert D. Tollison, Richard E. Wagner, 2012-12-06 Cigarettes are under political attack at all levels of government in the United States From Washington D C to state capitals to local governments proposals abound to increase the cigarette excise tax to impose smoking bans to prevent cigarette advertising to restrict the sale of cigarettes through vending machines to cut off the export of cigarettes to earmark the cigarette excise tax for health programs to divest the stock of cigarette companies and so on And all of these are purportedly being advocated in the name of health Undergirding and abetting the health argument is an economic argument that claims to place a value of up to 100 billion per year on the alleged health costs of smoking to the American economy which is more than 3 per pack of cigarettes smoked As our title suggests our interest lies in the economics of smoking and not in the health issues surrounding smoking We are professional economists and not medical scientists We will focus on what if any economic consequences arise for nonsmokers when smokers smoke For purposes of our discussion we simply accept the premise that smoking damages health and proceed with our analysis Since we have not studied the issue ourselves we have no way of knowing whether such a premise is true But it really does not matter for getting the economics of smoking right The important point resides in who pays for whatever to smoking
