The Strange Love of Martha Ivers Robert Rossen, 2024-08-06. A Gripping Classic That Will Enthrall Old and New Fans of Film Noir. Film noir is a genre that reached its peak in the 1940s and 1950s. Characterized by dark lighting and inspired by crime fiction, it often features characters such as a tough guy hero, mysterious beauties who may or may not be on the level, and prominent people with crimes to hide. The Strange Love of Martha Ivers 1946 is a beloved film in this exciting genre, and in this audio adaptation, you will experience the same thrill as the characters come alive in your mind as you hear their voices from the original motion picture. Itinerant gambler and war hero Sam Masterson, played by Van Heflin, returns to his hometown after 17 years, restarting a drama that left off when he ran away to the circus as a boy. Sam encounters old acquaintances Martha Ivers, played by Barbara Stanwyck, a former rebellious girl now a beautiful and formidable businesswoman, and her husband Walter O Neil, played by Kirk Douglas, a hard drinking district attorney tormented by shadows from his past. Sam also meets Toni Marachek, a deep voiced beauty just paroled from prison, whom he rescues and befriends. Sam's encounters with Martha, Toni, and Walter start a game in which characters vie to assess and manipulate one another's motives. The audio unravels a series of events that dredge up unwholesome secrets from the past and plunge the characters into a passionate melodrama with a bloody ending. With a tight, well-constructed plot that hinges on its characters' strengths and weaknesses, threats of blackmail, and a tension between cynicism and decency, this gripping story will delight and captivate longtime fans of film noir as well as newcomers to the genre.

Reconstructing Strangelove Mick Broderick, 2017-01-03. During his career, Stanley Kubrick became renowned for undertaking lengthy and exhaustive research prior to the production of all his films. In the lead up to what would eventually become Dr Strangelove 1964, Kubrick read voraciously and amassed a substantial library of works on the nuclear age. With rare access to unpublished materials, this volume assesses Dr Strangelove's narrative accuracy, consulting recently declassified Cold War nuclear policy documents alongside interviews with Kubrick's collaborators. It focuses on the myths surrounding the film, such as the origins and transformation of the straight script versions into what Kubrick termed a nightmare comedy. It assesses Kubrick's account of collaborating with the writers Peter George and Terry Southern against emphasis on dark subject matter paralleled the class conflict in labor and union movements that dominated the period. By following the evolution of film noir during the years following World War II, Broe illustrates how the noir figure represents labor as a whole. In the 1940s, both radicalized union members and protagonists of noir films were hunted and pursued by the law. Later, as labor unions achieve broad acceptance and respectability, the central noir figure shifts from fugitive criminal to law-abiding cop. Expanding his investigation into the Cold War and post 9/11 America, Broe extends his analysis of the ways film noir is intimately connected to labor history. A brilliant interdisciplinary examination, this is a work that will appeal to a broad spectrum of readers.

Films and British National Identity Jeffrey Richards, 1997-09-15. This book seeks to examine the ways in which the cinema has defined, mythified, and disseminated British national identity during the course of the twentieth century. It takes the form of a series of linked essays which examine chronologically, thematically, and by specific case studies of films, stars, and genres the complexities and ambiguities in the process of evolution and definition of the national identity. It argues for the creation of a distinctive British national identity both in cinema and the wider culture. But it also assesses the creation of alternative identities, both ethnic and regional, and examines the interaction of cinema and other cultural forms, music, literature, and television.
