Post-Fandom and the Millennial Blues Steve Redhead, 2002-11-01 Soccer fandom has traditionally been seen as an important part of adolescent generally male identity making In Post Fandom and the Millennial Blues Steve Redhead shows how this tradition of youth culture of fandom has been eroded in the last years of the twentieth century by the more fleeting style conscious allegiances inspired by television films and music The clubs that young people follow are determined by advertising and popular music the games that they watch are brought to them by the globalized culture of television as in the world cup staged in America even their fears of so called soccer hooliganism are determined by media engendered moral panics at a time when the phenomenon itself seems to be dying away

Sounds English Nabeel Zuberi, 2001 Zuberi looks at how the sounds images and lyrics of English popular music generate and critique ideas of national belonging recasting the social and even the physical landscapes of cities like Manchester and London The Smiths and Morrissey play on romanticized notions of the white English working class while the Pet Shop Boys map a queer urban Britain in the AIDS era The techno culture of raves and dance clubs incorporates both an anti institutional do it yourself politics and emergent leisure practices while the potent mix of technology and creativity in British black music includes local conditions as well as a sense of global diaspora British Asian musicians drawing on Afrodiasporic and South Asian traditions seek a sense of place in Britain as commercial interests try to pin down an image of them to market Sounds English shows how popular music complicates cherished notions of Englishness as it activates cultural outsiders and taps into a sense of not belonging
