

The Story of John Frederick Oberlin

By AUGUSTUS FIELD BEARD

With an Introduction by President Henry Churchill King of Oberlin College

A BIOGRAPHY OF ONE OF THE GREATEST OF RURAL MINISTERS

As President King so aptly says in his introduction to this book, "This life contains inspiration to good citizenship, to high public service, to truer living, to better teaching, to more devoted ministry."

"The personality of the man; his devout self-devotement to a seemingly impossible task; his heroic sacrifice in staying in so small a corner, when large offerings were made to his ambition and service; his wide scholarship and large learning which found sufficient scope by aggrandizing his field; the tremendous revolutions effected by his wisdom and courage; these things are told in Dr. Beard's book.

"He was among the first to apprehend the significance of environment in social problems, the community conditions as affecting spiritual fruitage. In his limited sphere, he put into practice the Christian social ethics, anticipating by a century modern ideas, but proving in most adverse circumstances, that the only method of social regeneration lies in doing the things next in our own sphere." — Hartford Seminary Record.

Dr. Beard made several visits to the village of Waldersbach in the mountains of the Vosges, where the devoted Pastor Oberlin labored over a hundred years ago, and gleaned material from descendants and others, which in addition to what memoirs supply, has enabled him to prepare this most complete and inspirational biography.
