Factors mediating performance monitoring in humans - from context to personality Patrizia Thoma,Christian Bellebaum, In our everyday life we constantly monitor our behaviour and adapt our responses following performance errors and feedback information from our environment Receiving positive or negative feedback which can be social monetary or some other type of feedback classifiable as good or bad can encourage us to continue with a specific action or may lead us to discontinue the same behaviour respectively Additionally we daily observe errors being committed by other people or other people receiving feedback for their behaviour We are able to infer how they feel in response to errors or feedback and whether we feel sorry for their failures and happy about their successes may depend on our empathic concern and on the relationship to the observed person At the same time we can also learn from other people s errors by adaptively modifying our own behaviour Recently a growing number of researchers in the neuroscientific community has begun to establish links between the ability to empathize with others and error feedback processing The ACC seems to be strongly involved in both error feedback processing and in affective empathic responding and positive relationships between error and feedback related ACC activity and self rated dispositional empathy have been reported Various contextual factors like the relationship between the observer and the observed person or person related characteristics like age gender and psychopathological symptoms may potentially modify this relationship In spite of these theoretical advances there are still crucial gaps in our knowledge of the different contextual factors and personality characteristics that affect performance monitoring in humans For instance it is not well understood how different empathy components might relate to different stages and different forms of error feedback processing Also the ability to engage in empathic perspective taking might be more related to observational than to active learning and empathy should become more relevant when the behaviour observed in someone else is also relevant for one s own actions One promising account in studying the relationship between person characteristics performance context and action monitoring is the investigation of these concepts across the lifespan While performance monitoring might be increasingly compromised in older individuals due to structural and functional changes in the relevant brain areas it might be partly compensated for by a heightened tendency and experience to engage in affective perspective taking Furthermore studying clinical populations may help us to disentangle the complex interdependence between performance monitoring and psychopathological symptoms Overall for the current Research Topic issue we would like to solicit original research articles reviews as well as opinion and method papers which investigate the neurocognitive mechanisms supporting performance monitoring providing a link to contextual factors or personality traits Studies using a range of different methods behavioural imaging electrophysiological etc investigating healthy populations with or without a lifespan perspective or clinical populations are welcome and authors with different academic backgrounds and working in different disciplines are encouraged to participate in order to promote a lively and integrative debate The Rotarian ,1951-07 Established in 1911 The Rotarian is the official magazine of Rotary International and is circulated worldwide Each issue contains feature articles columns and departments about or of interest to Rotarians Seventeen Nobel Prize winners and 19 Pulitzer Prize winners from Mahatma Ghandi to Kurt Vonnegut Jr have written for the magazine A Concordance to the Poems of Robert Browning Leslie Nathan Broughton,Benjamin Franklin Stelter,1925 Friends' Intelligencer ,1879

Learning in Social Context: The Nature and Profit of Living in Groups for Development Ildikó Király,David Buttelmann,2017-05-25 One of the distinctive features of humans is their unique sociality Humans live in organized societies that are characterized by a high level of interdependence of group members in various aspects of life ranging from the economic phenomenon of labour division to providing emotional support to others Under these circumstances the capacity to track social connections within and between groups has great adaptive value in managing everyday life We may understand the importance and adaptive value of tracking the scope of culturally shared knowledge if we consider the importance of cultural norms in guiding behaviour To become a competent member of their cultural group one must be able to conform to the group s specific behavioural norms and to accumulate culturally shared knowledge Acquiring this knowledge is essential for successful social interactions In contrast to current dominant explanatory theories emphasizing that social category formation is simply rooted in humans need to belong and affiliate with a group the aim of this e book is to provide evidence that in addition to its affiliative role children form social categories for epistemic purposes We show that children use specific cues like kinship patterns of resource allocation and consensus to understand group cohesion Section 1 Once children figured out who is in group and who is out group they show a significant in group bias in attention acting and learning Section 2 Yet this in group bias can be attenuated by induced synchronous behavior Section 3

Divisions in the Society of Friends Thomas Henry Speakman, 1896      The Complete Cloud of Unknowing, 2014-03-01
Central to the Christian mystical tradition is the inspired work of the anonymous author of The Cloud of Unknowing Rich with insights and perceptions of the obscurity and unknowability of God this work reveals God as being on an entirely different plane of existence from human beings so different that time bound human language is inadequate to describe God exhaustively or accurately Intellect and emotion both fail in seeking God who can only be encountered by rejecting all common earthly means in a cloud of forgetting and the discovery of Godself in the dark cloud of unknowing that can be pierced only with a lance of longing love Now we finally have a translation that captures all of this beauty and complexity without minimizing the nuances all of which are explained with extensive introductions and accompanying notes If I could keep with me only two books and a journal this book would be one of the books As far as I m concerned it s the most important book and among the most influential on Christian prayer in the last two millennia I m delighted to endorse this fine new translation and commentary The Rev Dr Chris Neufeld Erdman University Presbyterian Church Fresno CA author of Beyond Chaos Living the Christian Family in a World Like Ours and Returning to the Center Living Prayer in a Distracting World The Complete Cloud of Unknowing includes two classics of medieval Christian contemplative spirituality essential reading for anyone seeking to deepen their relationship with God through the practice of silent prayer They are rich texts full of nuanced wisdom that often gets lost in modern translations Father John Julian has captured the beauty humor and literary elegance of the original versions but also has supplemented his translation with detailed notes that convey the subtle spiritual insight that makes these works required reading I m excited about this book it s a title I will recommend both to beginners and to longstanding students of The Cloud Carl McColman author of Answering the Contemplative Call and The Lion the Mouse and the Dawn Treader      Violence Against Women Holly Johnson, Natalia Ollus, Sami Nevala, 2007-11-23
