The Environment for Aging Russell A. Ward,Mark La Gory,Susan R. Sherman,1988 The nature and consequences of aging depend on its environmental context and the literature does not treat the various environmental dimensions in an integrated fashion The authors introduce a general approach to the human ecosystem highlighting theoretical and empirical issues necessary to an understanding of person environment interaction related to aging They then investigate in detail three aspects of the environment of older persons residential and neighborhood interpersonal support networks and age related attitudes They give specific attention to the impact of the age composition of neighborhoods and interpersonal networks The authors present findings from their interview survey of 1 185 community residents aged 60 and over Major findings from the interviews include Despite objective neighborhood problems older persons express high neighborhood satisfaction This partly reflects limited residential options as well as a passive and vicarious spatial experience The environment is experienced in diverse ways however urbanism and personal competence shape the nature and outcomes of person environment interaction Older persons have relatively robust interpersonal support networks Perceived sufficiency of contact and support are more salient to morale than are more objective measures of interpersonal support Although attitudes toward other older people are generally favorable patterns of age identity reflect a detrimental view of aging There is little evidence that socialization for aging or age group solidarity make aging easier in this regard Older persons exhibit moderate age homogeneity within their interpersonal networks partly reflecting neighborhood age concentration Contrary to the apparent benefits of planned age segregated housing age homogeneity in neighborhoods and networks does not contribute to well being The authors examine three major themes in their concluding chapter age itself does not loom large in the lives of these community residents though age becomes salient under certain conditions there is diversity in the implications of the environmental context for aging in particular reflecting an environmental docility hypothesis and aging must be viewed in interactional or transactional terms older people construct the environment as a subjective entity Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), First multi year cumulation covers six years 1965 70 The Publishers' Trade List Annual ,1985
