

Spinocerebellar Degenerations

- Friedreich's ataxia and olivo-ponto-cerebellar atrophy are progressive diseases of the central nervous system affecting almost exclusively those structures of mammals either absent or rudimentary in lower vertebrates. The phylogenetically oldest portions of the cerebellar vermis (archicerebellum and paleocerebellum) are spared together with other old components of the cerebellar system, such as the dorsal and medial accessory olivary nuclei

Cerebellar Degenerations: Clinical Neurobiology Andreas Plaitakis, 1992-05-31 This book encompasses basic and clinical reports on the cerebellum and its primary atrophic disorders the cerebellar degenerations Rapid progress has been made in understanding the organization and function of the cerebellum at the neuronal synaptic and molecular level Of particular importance has been the identification of the chemical transmitters utilized by the cerebellar cellular systems More than any other brain region the cerebellum utilizes amino acids as its main excitatory and inhibitory neurotransmitters Excitatory amino acid transmitters in addition to serving neuronal communication may also mediate trophic and toxic effects and as such they may play a role in neurodegenerative processes The cerebellar degenerations were among the first human disorders with primary system atrophy to be studied clinically and pathologically This field of clinical cerebellar sciences no longer confined to the previously known descriptive level is now advancing rapidly propelled by rapid advances in neuroimaging immunology and molecular biology The advent of CT MRI and PET has in recent years permitted the study of central nervous system alterations in living patients thus contributing substantially to the accuracy of the diagnosis and the classification of these disorders The nosology of cerebellar degenerations which has been the subject of much debate for over a century is presently a dynamic field with new entities being recognized and old classic ataxias being redefined in the light of new genetic evidence Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), 1993 First multi year cumulation covers

Inherited Disorders of Carbohydrate Metabolism D. Burman, J.B. Holton, 2012-12-06 The sixteenth annual symposium of the Society for the Study of Inborn Errors of Metabolism was held in Bristol from 12th to 14th July 1978 About 25 invited speakers and 150 participants came from many parts of Europe and North America to consider the topic Inherited Disorders of Carbohydrate Metabolism Although some aspects of these disorders have formed part of the programme of previous symposia organized by the Society this was the first attempt to discuss them in a systematic manner The subject carbohydrate disorders embraces both familiar and well documented conditions and some lesser known aspects of genetic disease In all of these there remains much to be learnt about clinical and laboratory diagnosis treatment biochemical screening and pathogenesis Thus one aim of the Society to combine clinical and scientific interest can rarely have been better achieved in a single symposium Since the programme included diseases from six different areas of carbohydrate metabolism and contained so many distinguished speakers it is impossible to highlight the more important aspects of this symposium within a short space Each section made a notable contribution to knowledge and when time was available lively discussions ensued which have been recorded in the book However we wish to mention our two special lectures because they recognise people to whom the Society owes a great deal The Milner lecture has been given for the past 6 years as a tribute to
