Snakes, Sunrises, and Shakespeare Gordon H. Orians,2014-04-14 The eminent zoologist extends his pioneering work in evolutionary biology to examine our preferences predilections fears hopes and aspirations Stephen R Kellert author of Birthright Why do we jump in fear at the sight of a snake and marvel at the beauty of a sunrise These impulsive reactions are no accident in fact many of our human responses to nature are steeped in our evolutionary past we fear snakes because of the danger of venom and we welcome the assurances of sun as the predatory dangers of night disappear According to evolutionary biologist Gordon Orians many of our aesthetic preferences from the kinds of gardens we build to the foods we enjoy and the entertainment we seek are the lingering result of natural selection In Snakes Sunrises and Shakespeare Orians explores the role of evolution in human responses to the environment applying biological perspectives ranging from Darwin to current neuroscience Orians reveals how our emotional lives today are shaped by decisions our ancestors made centuries ago on African savannas as they selected places to live sought food and safety and socialized in small hunter gatherer groups During this time our likes and dislikes became wired in our brains as the appropriate responses to the environment meant the difference between survival or death His rich analysis explains why we mimic the tropical savannas of our ancestors in our parks and gardens why we are simultaneously attracted to and repelled by danger and how paying close attention to nature s sounds has made us an unusually musical species

Dialogues in Music Therapy and Music Neuroscience: Collaborative Understanding Driving Clinical Advances Julian O'Kelly, Jörg C. Fachner, Mari Tervaniemi, 2017-06-30. Music is a complex dynamic stimulus with an unparalleled ability to stimulate a global network of neural activity involved in attention, emotion, memory, communication, motor coordination and cognition. As such, it provides neuroscience with a highly effective tool to develop our understanding of brain function, connectivity and plasticity. Increasingly sophisticated neuroimaging technologies have enabled the expanding field of music neuroscience to reveal how musical experience, perception and cognition may support neuroplasticity with important implications for the rehabilitation and assessment of those with acquired brain injuries and neurodegenerative conditions. Other studies have indicated the potential for music to support arousal, attention and emotional regulation, suggesting therapeutic applications for conditions including ADHD, PTSD, autism, learning disorders and mood disorders. In common with neuroscience, the music therapy profession has advanced significantly in the past 20 years. Various interventions designed to address functional deficits and health care needs have been developed alongside standardised behavioural assessments. Historically, music therapy has drawn its evidence base from a number of contrasting theoretical frameworks. Clinicians are now turning to neuroscience, which offers a unifying knowledge base and frame of reference to understand and measure therapeutic interventions from a biomedical perspective. Conversely, neuroscience is becoming more enriched by learning about the neural effects of real world clinical applications in music therapy. While neuroscientific imaging methods may provide biomarking evidence for the efficacy of music therapy interventions, it also offers important tools to describe time-locked interactive therapy processes and feeds into the emerging field of social neuroscience. Music therapy is bound to the process of creating and experiencing music together in improvisation, listening and reflection. Thus, the situated cognition and experience of music developing over time and in differing contexts is of interest in time series data. We encouraged researchers to submit papers illustrating the mutual benefits of dialogue between music therapy and other disciplines important to this field, particularly neuroscience, neurophysiology and neuropsychology. The current eBook consists of the peer-reviewed responses to our call for papers.
