

It's different from other schools. I come from a secondary modern, and it's just like coming out of the dark and into the light.

The whole idea of the thing is different. The lessons are different. Summerhill isn't based on trying to make you learn, trying to make you learn your mathematics. . . .

It's trying to make you learn about life, a community. You learn from the community, you learn from the meetings, you go through your own little experiences . . . which work out. The whole idea is to be yourself, but not to interfere with other people's ideas and what they're running about and doing. You can be yourself as long as you don't annoy other people. Simon (senior)
