The Sun Shines Over the Sanggan River Ling Ding, 1984 A Selective Guide to Chinese Literature Milena Doleželová-Velingerová, 1988 The Monster That Is History David Der-Wei Wang, 2004-10-04 In ancient China a monster called Taowu was known for both its vicious nature and its power to see the past and the future Over the centuries Taowu underwent many incarnations until it became identifiable with history itself Since the seventeenth century fictive accounts of history have accommodated themselves to the monstrous nature of Taowu Moving effortlessly across the entire twentieth century literary landscape David Der wei Wang delineates the many meanings of Chinese violence and its literary manifestations Taking into account the campaigns of violence and brutality that have rocked generations of Chinese often in the name of enlightenment rationality and utopian plenitude this book places its arguments along two related axes history and representation modernity and monstrosity Wang considers modern Chinese history as a complex of geopolitical ethnic gendered and personal articulations of bygone and ongoing events His discussion ranges from the politics of decapitation to the poetics of suicide and from the typology of hunger and starvation to the technology of crime and punishment Ding Ling's Fiction Yi-tsi Mei Feuerwerker, 1982 Gender Politics in Modern China Tani E. Barlow, 1993 Through the lens of modern Chinese literature Gender Politics in Modern China explores the relationship between gender and modernity notions of the feminine and masculine and shifting arguments for gender equality in China Ranging from interviews with contemporary writers to historical accounts of gendered writing in Taiwan and semi colonial China to close feminist readings of individual authors these essays confront the degree to which textual strategies construct notions of gender Among the specific themes discussed are how femininity is produced in texts by allocating women to domestic space the extent to which textual production lies at the base of a changing historically specific code of the feminine the extent to which women in modern Chinese societies are products of literary canons the ways in which the historical processes of gendering have operated in Chinese modernity vis vis modernity in the West the representation of feminists as avengers and as westernized women and the meager recognition of feminism as a serious intellectual current and a large body of theory Originally published as a special issue of Modern Chinese Literature Spring Fall 1988 this expanded book represents some of the most compelling new work in post Mao feminist scholarship and will appeal to all those concerned with understanding a revitalized feminism in the Chinese context Contributors Carolyn Brown Ching kiu Stephen Chan Sung sheng Yvonne Chang Yu shih Chen Rey Chow Randy Kaplan Richard King Wolfgang Kubin Wendy Larson Lydia Liu Seung Yeun Daisy Ng Jon Solomon Meng Yue Wang Zheng The Monster That Is History Dewei Wang, 2004-10-04 In ancient China a monster called Taowu was known for both its vicious nature and its power to see the past and the future Since the seventeenth century fictive accounts of history have accommodated themselves to the monstrous nature of Taowu Moving effortlessly across the entire twentieth century literary landscape David Der wei Wang delineates the many meanings of Chinese violence and its

Revolutionary Waves Tie Xiao, 2020-10-26 During China's transition from dynastic empire to nation state the crowd emerged as a salient trope. Intellectuals across the ideological spectrum have used the crowd trope to ruminate on questions of selfhood and nationhood and to advance competing models of enlightenment and revolution. Revolutionary Waves analyzes the centrality of the crowd in the Chinese cultural and political imagination and its global resonances by delving into a wide range of fiction, philosophy, poetry, and psychological studies. Bringing together literary studies, intellectual history, critical theory, and the history of human sciences, this interdisciplinary work highlights unexplored interactions among emerging social, scientific forms of knowledge, new aesthetic modes of representation, and changing political imperatives. The work brings into relief the complexities of the modern Chinese crowd discourse, which generated subjectivities and oriented actions, enabled as well as constrained the expression of togetherness, and thus both expanded and limited the horizon of political possibilities in the emerging age of mass politics. The first in-depth examination of the aesthetics and politics of the crowd in modern Chinese literature and thought, Revolutionary Waves raises questions about the promise and peril of community as communion and reimagines collective life in China's post-socialist present.

The Encoding of Motion Events in Chinese Jingxia Lin, 2011 This dissertation investigates the relative order of verbal morphemes that express motion in Chinese motion constructions consisting of multiple motion morphemes, e.g., the order of pao (run) and jin (enter) in the construction pao jin fangjian (run enter room) / run into the room. It argues that the order is predictable. Drawing on recent work on scale structure, it divides Chinese motion morphemes into four types according to the type of scale each lexicalizes. Then it proposes a Motion Morpheme Hierarchy formed of these four types of motion morpheme that can be used to predict the order of motion morphemes. The hierarchy is supported by two extensive studies of multi-morpheme motion constructions using corpora of recent Chinese novels. In addition, the dissertation proposes a More Specific Constraint that explains why the Motion Morpheme Hierarchy emerges. The results of this study provide new insight into the distribution of motion morphemes in Chinese motion constructions and a more fine-grained analysis of the semantic relationships between the morphemes in these constructions, thus it contributes to an increased understanding of how motion events are expressed in Chinese. The findings of this study may also illuminate the distribution of motion verbs in other languages as well as constructions in domains other than motion.
