The Health And Social Needs Of Young Adults With Physical Disabilities:

The Health and Social Needs of Young Adults with Physical Disabilities Andrew Thomas, Martin Bax, Diane Smyth, 1989

This book addresses a topic that has received surprisingly little attention to date the health and social needs of young adults with physical disabilities Following an extensive review of the contemporary literature on the subject the authors report an in depth study on a large sample of physically disabled 18 to 25 year olds living in two survey areas one urban and one semirural The study which included pediatric examinations and interviews by a social psychologist found that a large proportion of subjects face social and medical problems for instance They have serious health needs that are not being met by the statutory services they left school with less than adequate skills to enable them to lead an independent adult life they are without a daytime occupation or attend day centers that are described as unstimulating places they do not receive all the financial benefits to which they are entitled they are isolated from their peers and lack the social skills to interact with others in a positive and successful way Parents and guardians were also found to receive little physical or emotional support These findings underline the need for a better system of providing and coordinating services for this client group and the authors call for the formation within each local health authority area of an Adult Disability Service that would have a clinical and planning role in terms of health care and that would act as a linchpin in the coordination of health educational social and voluntary services Although this work relates specifically to service provision in the United Kingdom it is felt that the conclusions and recommendations are also broadly applicable to the situation in other countries

Robards, 1994-06-24 Children with multiple disabilities and complex neurological problems often compounded by psychological and behavioral problems need care provision beyond the normal community and hospital pediatric services These children and their families need the help of a variety of specialists Organizing these is a complex problem and there is a constant risk of the family's needs being overridden by the professionals' convenience Dr Robards describes ways of providing all the necessary specialist care while at the same time increasing the family's participation and understanding to its optimum level Illustrating his proposals with a variety of lively case histories the author demonstrates that a rigid structure can never meet these children's needs This practical book offers clear recommendations about record keeping integrating voluntary support groups into the professionals' work the location and layout of premises used by the professionals and many other factors collectively critical to the efficient and humane delivery of this element of community care
