Mosher, 2016-07 The collapse of the Portuguese empire in the Americas in the early nineteenth century did not immediately or easily translate into the formation of the independent nation state of Brazil While Brazil had geographic meaning it did not constitute a cohesive political identity that could draw on basic loyalties The tumultuous struggle to nationhood in Brazil was marked by the interplay of differing social groups political parties and regions A series of violent revolts in Pernambuco a large slaveholding sugar producing province in northeastern Brazil exposed the tensions accompanying state and nation building Political Struggle Ideology and State Building delves into the complex and engaging history of the contested province of Pernambuco providing better understanding of the interplay between local and provincial social and political struggles and the construction of the nation state Jeffrey C Mosher reevaluates political parties institutions long assumed to be mere facades for elite factions with identical interests He demonstrates the importance of both formal political institutions and ideology as well as the efforts of the lower classes to assert their own visions and values Resentment of the Portuguese provided common ground for some elite factions and lower class groups and figured importantly in defining the nation Mosher's analysis clarifies how the lower class's assertiveness in a society sharply divided by slavery race and class frightened various elite groups into embracing both exclusionary discourses on race and the need for authoritarian centralized political institutions a development that proved to be an enduring legacy of the period
