The Ancient Coptic Churches of Egypt Alfred J. Butler, 1884      The Ancient Coptic Churches of Egypt Alfred Joshua Butler, 2004 This two volume work is the result of a seven month field work in Egypt during which Alfred Butler was a private tutor to Prince Tawfik from 1880 to 1881 Butler visited most of the old churches and monasteries in and around Cairo and traveled to the Wadi al Natrun the monasteries of the Red Sea and a number of churches in Upper Egypt His descriptions are invaluable and sometimes are the only record of what we know about a certain object or church It is an important document for its time and an early and influential example of unprejudiced scholarly interest for the culture of the Coptic Church Karel Inneme Leiden University Introduction to this reprint Alfred Joshua Butler was born at Loughborough Leicestershire in 1850 He studied at Trinity College Oxford and then was elected fellow of Brasenose College Oxford After being assistant master at Winchester from 1874 to 1879 was private tutor to Prince Tawfik in 1880 81 He has kept an interest for Egypt till the end of his life He also wrote The Arab Conquest of Egypt 1902 and Court Life in Egypt London 1887 partly based on his own experiences Together with B T A Evetts he published The Churches and Monasteries of Egypt and some neighbouring Countries attributed to Abu Salih the Armenian 1895 Gorgias Press reprint 2001      The Ancient Coptic Churches of Egypt Alfred J. Butler, 1970      The Ancient Coptic Churches of Egypt, Vol. 1 of 2 Alfred Joshua Butler, 2015-06-16 Excerpt from The Ancient Coptic Churches of Egypt Vol 1 of 2 The aim of this book is to make a systematic beginning upon a great subject Christian antiquities of Egypt Few subjects of equal importance have been so singularly neglected One writer admits that the Coptic Church is still the most remarkable monument of primitive Christianity another that it is the only living representative of the most venerable nation of all antiquity yet even the strength of this double claim has been powerless to create any working interest in the matter No doubt the attention of mere travellers has been bewitched and fascinated by the colossal remains of pagan times by the temples and pyramids which still glow in eternal sunshine while the Christian churches lie buried in the gloom of fortress walls or encircled and masked by almost impassable deserts About the Publisher Forgotten evidence enough to decide the question I think however that a comparison of the plan with that of the White Monastery near Suhag in Upper Egypt will settle the fact that the western apsidal chamber in the one case as in the other was either a chapel or a baptistery and the probabilities are very largely in favour of the former In the plan of the White Monastery a north aisle door is simply impossible to imagine and there is definite evidence for the altar in this part of the narthex Similarly it is almost indisputable that the apsidal chamber at Abu Sargah was anciently a chapel and that the original entrance to it was southward from the central part of the narthex and not westward from the street It was doubtless this chapel into which the newly baptised were taken to receive their first communion The general shape of the church is or was a nearly regular oblong and its general structure is basilican It consists of narthex nave north and south aisle choir and three altars eastward each in its own chapel of these the central and southern chapels are apsidal the northern is square ended On plan Abu Sargah much resembles a type common among the Syrian churches of the sixth and seventh centuries such as that of Kalb Luzah Turmanin or Al Barah<sup>1</sup> but these Syrian churches differ from the Coptic in being built of hewn stone with windows and wide arches and above
