Berardo,1982 The articles in this volume reflect a reorientation in the ways that scientists have viewed human growth and development In this new perspective transitions are viewed as normal situations that are likely to confront anyone Whatever the situation each transition encompasses a bridging period often characterized by feeling of uncertainty and instability During this interval the person engages in various degrees of social and psychological adaptations to the changing situations in his or her life While such transitional processes have long been characteristic of the human condition it is only in recent years that social and behavioral scientists have begun to rectify out limited knowledge concerning how people and families negotiate a wide array of middle and late life transitions The current preoccupation with the transitions of middle and old age has evolved from several historical economic and demographic changes that have combined to shift our populations toward the middle of the age structure and have produced new stages in the life cycle The result is that today most Americans can expect to pass through these new stages including long term survival the empty nest

period universal retirement and an extended term of widowhood in late life characterized by solitary living Many of these changes have in common that they involve periods of imbalance often accompanied by strong emotions Lives must be restructured adaptations made and modifications in both mental and physical behavior must occur The descriptions of these transitions and the process by which adaptations to them are made are the subjects of the articles in this issue
