suggests how developing countries can use economic law and technology to tap digital markets in the developed world The book also argues that the advance of basic living standards in some developing countries can be achieved through technological processes but that this cannot happen without such states paying greater attention to the enforcement of economic social and cultural rights at home Picking up the property rights debate including through bilateral trade the author argues that ensuring beneficial technology transfer will require balancing foreign investor rights to protect intellectual property It will also involve restrictions imposed by competition law and WTO surveillance to check the possible misuse of market power by multinational companies The proposed mixture of measures should he argues provide incentives for Foreign Direct Investment Providing a thorough review of the application of WTO law to the telecommunications sector and the regulation of international digital networks this book will be of great interest to postgraduate students in international economic law and international development law as well as those interested in human rights law and technology It will also appeal to government regulators NGOs and technologists interested in ICTs and development
