Sanctuary Jessica Squires, 2013-09-20 Canada enjoys a reputation as a peaceable kingdom and a refuge from militarism Yet Canadians during the Vietnam War era met American war resisters not with open arms but with political obstacles and public resistance and the border remained closed to what were then called draft dodgers and deserters Between 1965 and 1973 a small but active cadre of Canadian antiwar groups and peace activists launched campaigns to open the border Jessica Squires tells their story often in their own words Interviews and government documents reveal that although these groups ultimately met with success in the process shaping Canadian identity and Canada's relationship with the United States they had to overcome state surveillance and resistance from police politicians and bureaucrats Building Sanctuary not only brings to light overlooked links between the anti draft movement and Canadian immigration policy it challenges cherished notions about Canadian identity and Canada in the 1960s Worth Fighting For Lara Campbell, Michael Dawson, Catherine Gidney, 2015-03-20 Historians veterans museums and public education campaigns have all documented and commemorated the experience of Canadians in times of war But Canada also has a long rich and important historical tradition of resistance to both war and militarization This collection brings together the work of sixteen scholars on the history of war resistance Together they explore resistance to specific wars including the South African War the First and Second World Wars and Vietnam the ideology and nature of resistance national ethical political spiritual and organized activism against militarization such as cadet training the Cold War and nuclear arms As the federal government continues to support the commemoration and celebration of Canada's participation in past wars this collection offers a timely response that explores the complexity of Canada's position in times of war and the role of social movements in challenging the militarization of Canadian society
