The Dragon and the Raven G. A. Henty,2013-05-17 The fortifications in those days were very far from having attained the strength and solidity which a few generations later were bestowed upon them The stones of which they were constructed were comparatively small and fastened together by mortar consequently they could ill resist even an assault by manual weapons Covered by their shields the Northmen worked untiringly at the foundations and piece by piece the walls crumbled to the ground Every effort however to enter at the breaches so made was repulsed and Siegfroi kept back his warriors determined to delay the grand assault until the next day By nightfall the tower was in ruins scarce a portion of the walls remaining erect Many of the besieged had been killed The archbishop was wounded with an arrow Frederic a young soldier who led the troops of the church was killed

The Dragon and the Raven George Alfred Henty,2020-05-02 A low hut built of turf roughly thatched with rushes and standing on the highest spot of some slightly raised ground It was surrounded by a tangled growth of bushes and low trees through which a narrow and winding path gave admission to the narrow space on which the hut stood The ground sloped rapidly Twenty yards from the house the trees ceased and a rank vegetation of reeds and rushes took the place of the bushes and the ground became soft and swampy A little further pools of stagnant water appeared among the rushes and the path abruptly stopped at the edge of a stagnant swamp though the passage could be followed by the eye for some distance among the tall rushes The hut in fact stood on a hummock in the midst of a wide swamp where the water sometimes deepened into lakes connected by sluggish streams On the open spaces of water herons stalked near the margin and great flocks of wild fowl dotted the surface Other signs of life there were none

although a sharp eye might have detected light threads of smoke curling up here and there from spots where the ground rose somewhat above the general level These slight elevations however were not visible to the eye for the herbage here grew shorter than on the lower and wetter ground and the land apparently stretched away for a vast distance in a dead flat a rush covered swamp broken only here and there by patches of bushes and low trees The little hut was situated in the very heart of the fen country now drained and cultivated but in the year 870 untouched by the hand of man the haunt of wild fowl and human fugitives At the door of the hut stood a lad some fourteen years old His only garment was a short sleeveless tunic girded in at the waist his arms and legs were bare his head was uncovered and his hair fell in masses on his shoulders In his hand he held a short spear and leaning against the wall of the hut close at hand was a bow and quiver of arrows The lad looked at the sun which was sinking towards the horizon
