The Dutchmans Fireside:

The Dutchman's Fireside James Kirke Paulding, 1831 The Dutchman's Fireside, 1839 The Dutchman's Fireside James Kirke Paulding, 1868 The Dutchman's Fireside; a Tale James Kirke Paulding, 2013-09 This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1868 edition. Excerpt: CHAPTER I SCENES AND RURAL MANNERS Somewhere about the time of the old French war there resided on the rich border that skirts the Hudson not a hundred miles from the good city of Albany a DEGREES family of some distinction which we shall call Vancourp consisting of three brothers whose names were DEGREES DEGREES DEGREES DEGREES DEGREES. His eldest son Ariel or Auriel as it was pronounced by the Dutch of that day. They were the sons of one of the earliest as well as most respectable of the emigrants from Holland and honourably sustained the dignity of their ancestry by sturdy integrity liberal hospitality and a generous public spirit. On the death of the patriarch who departed this life almost a century old according to the custom of those early times the estate was amicably divided among his three sons the portion of the eldest being distinguished from that of the others only by comprising the mansion house. This was the sole compliment paid to the right of primogeniture which in almost every other Christian country swallows up the inheritance of the younger offspring and enables one man to wallow in overgrown luxury at the expense of all the rest of his blood and name. It was rather a voluntary acknowledgment than a concession claimed. At this early period it was not the general custom in the State for people that had children to make their wills and however singular it may seem there were fewer lawsuits concerning the division of property among heirs than there are now when such particular care is taken in the devising of estates that it generally takes three or four courts six or eight lawyers and the like number of years to interpret the oracle. And how can it be otherwise since I once heard a great pleader say The Dutchman's Fireside James Kirke Paulding, 1837 *Westward ho!
