

Dancers

On the stage, they stand alone,
Every move, every tone,
A tale told, a passion shown,
Dance is where their heart is thrown.

Spotlights shine, casting a glow,
On dancers who let emotions flow.
Every leap, every stance,
Is a chapter in the dance.

As curtains fall, applause does echo,
Resonating with passion, every crescendo.
For on that stage, with every glance,
A dancer shares the soul of dance.

Song And Dance Poems:

Song and Dance Alan Shapiro, 2004 Song and Dance Patricia Brooks, 2011-02-05 Song and Dance is in its first section a series of poems that make the case for the return of significant sound and rhythm to contemporary poetry The author feels that in the modern poet's rejection of strict meter and automatic end rhyme we have lost some of poetry's most powerful tools The poems in the following section offer a wide range of styles forms and language in illustration of poetry's infinite variety The book is specifically designed for classroom use at the high school and college levels using its argument and examples to touch off discussion of the role of sound and rhythm in the modern poem The wide range of examples in the Poetry's Variety section give students a stimulating range of styles and voices to spark their interest as they develop their own unique voices The annotated traditional forms being currently written poems avoids the idea that such forms are dead and interesting only from a historical perspective Ultimately the book opens the world of poetry in a way that may engage students by giving poetry a lively and present sense of poetry as a living art Song and Dance HORATIO N.
