

The Differences Between Marketing and Advertising

Marketing is the systematic planning, implementation, and control of a mix of activities intended to bring together buyers and sellers for the mutually advantageous exchange or transfer of products or services.

Think of marketing as a step-by-step process that begins with a unique selling proposition—a short compelling sentence that describes your business.

All marketing elements must work independently but they also must work together toward the bigger goal of one unified marketing campaign with a common message.

Advertising is only one component of the overall marketing process.

Advertising includes the placement of an ad in such mediums as newspapers, magazines, direct mail, billboards, TV, radio, and online.

It is the most expensive part of all marketing plans.
