

CONVERGENCE

CONVERGENCE is a series devoted to those ideas which mark a turning-point in history. It is a series in which the most concerned thinkers of our time explore the new frontiers of knowledge in which we are living, and which has transformed the evolutionary process of nature. What will be the future of this spiritual science built upon the foundations of man and nature, on the framework which makes us living beings part of the universe and with some idea of the universe the subject of our thought and action, the process in the universe as the universe is as we see it, as it is in the process of becoming as objective observers, for we are all participants in the cosmic scheme and thus have not finished, but rather engaged with, those natural laws which we live and the way each has shaped. There is a growing awareness that man is a particle among other particles in a breathing universe, part of the creative, living, dynamic process of the manifold rhythms of existence. For there is a basic correlation of all the elements in nature, including man's nature, which cannot be separated, which unifies each other, converges and also each other mutually. Modern sciences are now known to us: the mystery of the universe and the mystery of man's mind are being revealed. Man and nature converge: space, time, and motion unite. The time is now in the past, past as it is now, the time (eternal time with all nature) converges and observer are inseparable. Religion and science meet, thought and feeling reunite. Man is, however, becoming a uniting his appropriate place in the universe, being recognized with the universe, and his fate now depends upon the choices he makes.
