fascinating of the two in part because it is also our own story In this literate and entertaining book eminent naturalist David Rains Wallace brings the saga of ancient mammals to a general audience for the first time Using artist Rudolph Zallinger s majestic The Age of Mammals mural at the Peabody Museum as a frame for his narrative Wallace deftly moves over varied terrain drawing from history science evolutionary theory and art history to present a lively account of fossil discoveries and an overview of what those discoveries have revealed about early mammals and their evolution In these pages we encounter towering mammoths tiny horses giant clawed ground sloths whales with legs uintatheres zhelestids and other exotic extinct creatures as well as the scientists who discovered and wondered about their remains We meet such memorable figures as Georges Cuvier Richard Owen Edward D Cope George Gaylord Simpson and Stephen Jay Gould and learn of their heated disputes from Cuvier s and Owen s fights with early evolutionists to present controversies over the Late Cretaceous mass extinction Wallace s own lifelong interest in evolution is reflected in the book s evocative and engaging style and in the personal experiences he expertly weaves into the tale providing an altogether expansive perspective on what Darwin described as the grandeur of evolution

Catastrophic Thinking David Sepkoski,2020-09-24 A history of scientific ideas about extinction that explains why we learned to value diversity as a precious resource at the same time as we learned to think catastrophically about extinction We live in an age in which we are repeatedly reminded by scientists by the media by popular culture of the looming threat of mass extinction We're told that human activity is currently producing a sixth mass extinction perhaps of even greater magnitude than the five previous geological catastrophes that drastically altered life on Earth Indeed there is a very real concern that the human species may itself be poised to go the way of the dinosaurs victims of the most recent mass extinction some 65 million years ago How we interpret the causes and consequences of extinction and their ensuing moral imperatives is deeply embedded in the cultural values of any given historical moment And as David Sepkoski reveals the history of scientific ideas about extinction over the past two hundred years as both a past and a current process is implicated in major changes in the way Western society has approached biological and cultural diversity It seems self-evident to most of us that diverse ecosystems and societies are intrinsically valuable but the current fascination with diversity is a relatively recent phenomenon In fact the way we value diversity depends crucially on our sense that it is precarious that it is something actively threatened and that its loss could have profound consequences In Catastrophic Thinking Sepkoski uncovers how and why we learned to value diversity as a precious resource at the same time as we learned to think catastrophically about extinction
