Sylvia Plath And The Theatre Of Mourning:

Sylvia Plath and the Theatre of Mourning Christina Britzolakis, 1999 The history of Plath's reception as a writer has been beset by the language of scandal Psychobiographical speculation combined with the controversy surrounding the posthumous publication of her work has dominated critical debate at the expense of her poetic achievement In new contrast Sylvia Plath and the Theatre of Mourning offers a theoretically informed yet extremely readable engagement with the texts themselves The book challenges the critical tendency to see Plath's writing in confessional terms and draws attention to the crucial and hitherto neglected dimension of self reflexivity Christina Britzolakis argues that Plath developed a theatrical conception of the speaking subject which made the work of mourning inseparable from its performance in language she shows how Plath explored the potentialities and limits of figurative language and also engaged with the legacy of modernism to arrive at this distinctive mode Interweaving close reading and theoretical reflection Sylvia Plath and the Theatre of Mourning constructs a framework of interpretation which attends to the formal complexity of the texts without detaching them either from their historical moment or from contemporary debates about language gender and subjectivity Sylvia Plath Harold Bloom, Sterling Professor of Humanities Harold Bloom, 2007 A collection of essays on poet Sylvia Plath's life and work

A Companion to Twentieth-Century Poetry Neil Roberts, 2008-04-15 In the twentieth century more people spoke English and more people wrote poetry than in the whole of previous history and this Companion strives to make sense of this crowded poetical era The original contributions by leading international scholars and practising poets were written as the contributors adjusted to the idea that the possibilities of twentieth century poetry were exhausted and finite However the volume also looks forward to the poetry and readings that the new century will bring The Companion embraces the extraordinary development of poetry over the century in twenty English speaking countries a century which began with a bipolar transatlantic connection in modernism and ended with the decentred heterogeneity of post colonialism Representation of the canonical and the marginal is therefore balanced including the full integration of women poets and feminist approaches and the in depth treatment of post colonial poets from various national traditions Discussion of context intertextualities and formal approaches illustrates the increasing self consciousness and self reflexivity of the period whilst a Readings section offers new readings of key selected texts The volume as a whole offers critical and contextual coverage of the full range of English language poetry in the last century
