itself have played in western discourses framing Afghanistan The British Romantic Orientalists of the 19th century studied the region in depth and were drawn to what they perceived as an alien space where they could remake themselves in print and in life These writers and those who followed including scholars civil servants and wives or professional women were inspired by the region and sometimes crossed ethnic national and imaginative boundaries This book explores the connections that were forged in print through fantastic and familiar assumptions regarding the region and its people Government and Society in Afghanistan Hasan Kawun Kakar,2014-08-27 An authoritative study of the administrative social and economic structure of Afghanistan at the beginning of the twentieth century Government and Society in Afghanistan covers a decisive stage in the country s history The period covered the reign of the Iron Amir Rahman Khan was in many ways the beginning of modern Afghanistan as a cohesive nation It was under the Amir that its borders were established its internal unification completed and the modern concept of nationhood implanted Hsan Kawun Kakar considers both the internal and the external forces that influenced Afghanistan s development Thus modernization centralization and nationalization are seen as both defensive reactions to European imperialism and a necessary step toward capital formation and industrialization The first part of the book covers the government of the Amir from the personality of the ruler to a comprehensive overview of taxation and local government The second part views these economic and social institutions from the perspective of the major segments of the populace including nomads townsmen tribes women slaves landowners mullahs merchants and others

Fluri,Rachel Lehr,2017 The 2001 invasion of Afghanistan by United States and coalition forces was followed by a flood of aid and development dollars and experts representing well over two thousand organizations each with separate policy initiatives geopolitical agendas and socioeconomic interests This book examines the everyday actions of people associated with this international effort with a special emphasis on small players individuals and groups who charted alternative paths outside the existing networks of aid and development This focus highlights the complexities complications and contradictions at the intersection of the everyday and the geopolitical showing how dominant geopolitical narratives influence daily life in places like Afghanistan and what happens when the goals of aid workers or the needs of aid recipients do not fit the narrative Specifically this book examines the use of gender need and grief as drivers for both common and exceptional responses to geopolitical interventions Throughout this work Jennifer L Fluri and Rachel Lehr describe intimate encounters at a microscale to complicate and dispute the ways in which Afghans and their country have been imagined described fetishized politicized vilified and rescued The authors identify the ways in which Afghan men and women have been narrowly categorized as perpetrators and victims respectively. They discuss several projects to show how gender and grief became forms of currency that were exchanged for different social, economic, and political opportunities. Such entanglements suggest the power and influence of the United States while illustrating the ways in which individuals and groups have attempted to chart alternative avenues of interaction, intervention, and interpretation.
