Hollywood on the Hudson Richard Koszarski,2008 Thomas Edison invented his motion picture system in New Jersey in the 1890s and within a few years most American filmmakers could be found within a mile or two of the Hudson River They planted themselves here because they needed the artistic and entrepreneurial energy that D W Griffith realized New York had in abundance But as the going rate for land and labor skyrocketed and their business grew more industrialized most of them moved out The way most historians

explain it the role of New York in the development of American film ends here In Hollywood on the Hudson Richard Koszarski rewrites an important part of the history of American cinema During the 1920s and 1930s film industry executives had centralized the mass production of feature pictures in a series of gigantic film factories scattered across Southern California while maintaining New York as the economic and administrative center But as Koszarski reveals many writers producers and directors also continued to work here especially if their independent vision was too big for the Hollywood production line East Coast filmmakers Oscar Micheaux Rudolph Valentino Ben Hecht Charles MacArthur Paul Robeson Gloria Swanson Max Fleischer and others quietly created a studio system without back lots long term contracts or seasonal production slates They substituted newsreel photography for Hollywood glamour targeted niche audiences instead of middle American families ignored accepted dramatic conventions and pushed the boundaries of motion picture censorship Rebellious and unconventional they saw the New York studios as laboratories not factories and used them to pioneer the development of new technologies from talkies to television new genres new talent and ultimately an entirely new vision of commercial cinema
