Symphonic Poem Carole Miller Genshaft, 2007 Abstract In this case study I examine the extraordinary work of contemporary artist Aminah Brenda Lynn Robinson and the intersection of my experience as an educator serving as a co curator for Symphonic Poem a major retrospective exhibition of her work in 2003 I examine the role of museum educators in developing and presenting exhibitions that empower visitors to discover their own meaning in Aminah's complex and layered work My examination of the case and my research related to it highlight the challenges and opportunities that face museum educators and all museum workers in an era when museums are examining their relevancy as they compete with all types of cultural and commercial events and venues for people's time and attention This collaboration between a curator of contemporary art and an educator provides an alternative approach to traditional museum practices and organizational structures and raises important questions concerning the training and practice of museum professionals In addition to examining the role of museum educators in exhibitions this work presents strategies to encourage K 12 students and visitors of all ages to critically confront issues of identity race and oppression that hover just below the rich patterns and button encrusted surface of Aminah's work In the world the artist has created being black is the norm but everyone is invited to participate by sharing their memories stories and dreams Art like that of Aminah Robinson helps to fill in the gaps that the modern museum created in regard to marginalizing and ignoring the voices of women and minorities Educators in the post museum can become border crossers themselves in creating exhibitions linking them with a broad range of communities and encouraging visitors to become border crossers as well Theorizing Scriptures Vincent Wimbush,2008-01-04 Historically religious scriptures are defined as holy texts that are considered to be beyond the abilities of the layperson to interpret Their content is most frequently analyzed by clerics who do not question the underlying political or social implications of the text but use the writing to convey messages to their congregations about how to live a holy existence In Western society moreover what counts as scripture is generally confined to the Judeo Christian Bible leaving the voices of minorities as well as the holy texts of faiths from Africa and Asia for example unheard In this innovative collection of essays that aims to turn the traditional bible study definition of scriptures on its head Vincent L Wimbush leads an in depth look at the social cultural and racial meanings invested in these texts Contributors hail from a wide array of academic fields and geographic locations and include such noted academics as Susan Harding Elisabeth Sh ssler Fiorenza and William L Andrews Purposefully transgressing disciplinary boundaries this ambitious book opens the door to different interpretations and critical orientations and in doing so allows an ultimately humanist definition of scriptures to emerge Migrations and Creative Expressions in Africa and the African Diaspora Toyin Falola,Niyi Afolabi,Adérónké Adésolá Adésànyà,2008 Contributors ranging from architects to linguists explore the cultural and spiritual dynamics of migrations in Africa and the African diaspora The co authored volume provides readers with fresh insights on African migration and the attendant implications productions and generations of the historic experiences of those who were forcefully displaced and others who willfully relocated to other spaces of the world The book seeks to engage debates on multiple issues which underpin the provoking history of African migration and their attendant implications provoke a rethinking of the sociology and politics of migrating souls and resistant spirits in the Americas Europe and Africa the restive yet resolute entities scattered still metaphorically united in their quest for and hold on to identity engender fresh understanding and interpretations of cultural ethos of African native homelands and establish where present their replication in migrant communities in the diaspora and tie African migration history with modernity thereby underscoring the points of their interactions departures and tangentially establishing remembrances
