Singapore Kevin YL Tan, 2015-04-30 Singapore's Constitution was hastily cobbled together after her secession from the Federation of Malaysia in 1965 In the subsequent 50 years the Constitution has been amended many times to evolve a Constitution like no other in the world Outwardly Singapore has a Westminster type constitutional democracy with an elected legislature fundamental liberties and safeguards to ensure the independence of the judiciary On closer inspection the Constitution displays many innovative and unusual characteristics Most notable among them are the various types of Members of Parliament that have been introduced since the mid 1980s the office of the Elected President and the fact that there is no constitutional right to property This volume seeks to explain the nature and context of these constitutional innovations in the context of a pluralistic multi ethnic state obsessed with public order and security The volatile racial mix of Singapore with its majority Chinese population nestled in a largely Malay Islamic world compels the state to search for ethnic management solutions through the Constitution to guarantee to the Malays and other ethnic minorities their status in the polity In addition it examines how the concept of the rule of law is perceived by the strong centrist state governed by a political party that has been in power since 1959 and continues to hold almost hegemonic power

Land Rights and Expropriation in Ethiopia Daniel W. Ambaye,2015-02-13 This thesis provides a new approach to the Ethiopian Land Law debate The basic argument made in this thesis is that even if the Ethiopian Constitution provides and guarantees common ownership of land together with the state to the people this right has not been fully realized whether in terms of land accessibility enjoyability and payment of fair compensation in the event of expropriation Expropriation is an inherent power of the state to acquire land for public purpose activities It is an important development tool in a country such as Ethiopia where expropriation remains the only method to acquire land Furthermore the two preconditions of payment of fair compensation and existence of public purpose justifications are not strictly followed in Ethiopia The state remains the sole beneficiary of the process by capturing the full profit of land value while paying inadequate compensation to those who cede their land by expropriation Secondly the broader public purpose power of the state in expropriating the land for unlimited activities puts the property owners under imminent risk of expropriation
