The Health Rationale For Family Planning Timing Of Births And Child Survival:

The Health Rationale for Family Planning United Nations. Department for Economic and Social Information and Policy Analysis. Population Division, 1994 Among the most influential findings from the World Fertility Survey WFS were those linking fertility patterns to child survival in particular the findings concerning the high infant and child mortality for children born after a short birth interval This study examined the relations between fertility and child survival based on more recent data from the United Nations Demographic and Health Surveys of 25 developing countries In the first part of the study tabular analysis was used to assess the excess risks of child mortality associated with child bearing too early or with short intervals between births The second part used multivariate analysis in order to examine how far the differences observed are affected by a range of controls such as mother s education father s education father s occupation and place of residence Results indicated that children born to mothers under age 18 are 46 percent more likely to die before age 5 than children born to mothers age 20 to 34 similar to the earlier WFS that children born less than 18 months after a previous birth are more than twice as likely to die as children born after a 2 to 4 year interval this risk rate is similar to WFS results although the incidence of such births has generally decreased that maternal education appears to be a very powerful and pervasive correlate of child survival and that for several countries there are striking indications of regional differences in child survival Contains 46 tables and 19 references EV

From Death to Birth National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, 1998-01-12 The last 35 years or so have witnessed a dramatic shift in the demography of many developing countries Before 1960 there were substantial improvements in life expectancy but fertility declines were very rare Few people used modern contraceptives and couples had large families Since 1960 however fertility rates have fallen in virtually every major geographic region of the world for almost all political social and economic groups What factors are responsible for the sharp decline in fertility What role do child survival programs or family programs play in fertility declines Casual observation suggests that a decline in infant and child mortality is the most important cause but there is surprisingly little hard evidence for this conclusion The papers in this volume explore the theoretical methodological and empirical dimensions of the fertility mortality relationship It includes several detailed case studies based on contemporary data from developing countries and on historical data from Europe and the United States

Global Environmental Challenges of the Twenty-first Century David E. Lorey, 2003 The most serious environmental problems of the twenty first century have the potential to alter the course of life on this planet Global warming toxic waste water and air pollution acid rain and shrinking energy supplies are frightening challenges that may threaten our future if we do not face up to them p Global Environmental Challenges provides important information and gives us hope about the environment This book first helps us to grasp these difficulties then shows us the choices we can make How long to leave a light on whether to take the car the train or bicycle to work whether to recycle or throw away whether to vote to curb continued suburban sprawl all of these decisions can make a difference p This collection of some of the best essays and articles on the environment comes from a variety of sources including journals magazines websites of ecological conservation organizations and other publications p Five major sections investigate the interaction of population growth consumption and environment the emerging crisis in freshwater around the globe global climate and atmosphere including global warming biodiversity loss and the concept of sustainable development using natural resources to place future human development on a sustainable path The final section on sustainable development reveals how we can take action As individuals we can make a difference readily and easily without making huge personal sacrifices As societies we can work together in a global community of interest to sustain the earth p This valuable resource offers readers a better understanding of our environmental problems and presents solutions to improving the health of the planet p

Conferencia Mundial de Las Encuestas de Demografía Y Salud, 1991. A Commentary on the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child. Sharon Detrick, 2023-12-18. This book provides a commentary on the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child which was adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 20 November 1989. Part One contains a general introduction to the Convention on the Rights of the Child and deals with matters such as the drafting history, the contents, direct application, horizontal effects, limitations, the Committee on the Rights of the Child, and the Convention's final provisions. Part Two contains an article-by-article commentary, the aim of which is not to give an interpretation of the precise nature and scope of States' parties' obligations, but rather to identify the materials or sources which provide guidance in that regard. In the identification of such materials, attention has been paid to the general rules of treaty interpretation as set forth in the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties. Resources in Education, 1997.

Health and Mortality, 1998. A summary of recent information on such topics as levels and trends of mortality, child survival, and health, primary health care, and the health care sector, women's health, and safe motherhood, HIV/AIDS, the epidemiological transition, health and mortality policies, and activities of intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations with respect to health and mortality. The Health Rationale for Family Planning. United Nations. Department for Economic and Social Information and Policy Analysis. Population Division, 1994. Among the most influential findings from the World Fertility Survey (WFS) were those linking fertility patterns to child survival, in particular the findings concerning the high infant and child mortality for children born after a short birth interval. This study examined the relations between fertility and child survival based on more recent data from the United Nations Demographic and Health Surveys of 25 developing countries. In the first part of the study, tabular analysis was used to assess the excess risks of child mortality associated with child bearing too early or with short intervals between births. The second part used multivariate analysis in order to examine how far the differences observed are affected by a range of controls such as mother's education, father's education, father's occupation, and place of residence. Results indicated that children born to mothers under age 18 are 46 percent more likely to die before age 5 than children born to mothers age 20 to 34, similar to the earlier WFS that children born less than 18 months after a previous birth are more than twice as likely to die as children born after a 2 to 4 year interval; this risk rate is similar to WFS results although the incidence of such births has generally decreased that maternal education appears to be a very powerful and pervasive correlate of child survival and that for several countries there are striking indications of regional differences in child survival. Contains 46 tables and 19 references. EV. Women in the Third World. Nelly P. Stromquist, 2014-04-04. Ideal for researching the status and activities of Third World women. For quick, reliable coverage of women's issues in developing countries here is a concise reference work written by a team of more than 80 international experts. The Encyclopedia comprises 68 essays that cover the entire Third World from Africa to Asia from the Near East to South and Central America from the South Pacific to the Caribbean. The women authors are acknowledged experts from Harvard University, the World Bank, the United Nations Development Fund for Women, the University of Nairobi, the International Labor Organization, and other institutions who summarize the most recent scholarship on a wide range of important subjects. Thoroughly indexed and cross-referenced, the Encyclopedia is an ideal starting point for in-depth research in such areas as recent developments in the prevention of violence against women, the conditions of women's lives across regions and countries, women's participation in government, science and technology, hidden curriculum issues in higher education, an overview of women's experiences as small-scale entrepreneurs. A feminist viewpoint enhances the coverage. Informed throughout by a feminist perspective, the Encyclopedia focuses on traditional women's concerns such as political participation, human rights, nutrition, housework, the family, equality, health, and more. But the coverage also extends to such issues as domestic and sexual violence, creation of women-friendly cities, patriarchal ideologies, as religious beliefs, the needs of older women, new jobs and exploitation in industrial production, AIDS, the gender consequences of ecological devastation, movements for change, and other areas of increasing awareness. Geographical entries cover all the major regions and countries and discuss conditions and issues in each area. Spotlights the newest and best sources. The Encyclopedia brings together information that has been widely scattered in sources from many disciplines. An introduction by the editor illuminates the most important issues faced by Third World women today and analyzes the drastically changed global situation and how the changes impacted on the material presented in the Encyclopedia. Reference aids make information retrieval easy. An annotated bibliography of the latest and most important sources, as well as a reference list at the end of each chapter, provide quick access to current literature. A thorough name and subject index makes it easy to pinpoint information. Special Features: Offers articles by recognized scholars and activists on gender and developmental issues. Presents a variety of perspectives by women from both industrialized and developing countries. Summarizes the literature of established disciplines, bringing together important material scattered in many sources. Identifies new areas for research affecting gender and development in emerging fields such as legal rights. Outlines strategies for action in such critical areas as ecology and urban issues. An annotated bibliography and list of references at the end of each chapter make it easy to expand your research.
