The activities of the Fondazione ENI Enrico Mattei cover a broad spectrum of research topics ranging from economics to engineering from environmental management at the industry or regional level to basic mathematical modelling research It is the combination of the activities on these last two topics that led the Fondazione to organise with the University of Geneva a work shop where operation research tools were designed with the aim to provide national and local policy makers with appropriate analytical and policy instruments for environmental management In the recent past attention has often been devoted to global environmental issues in which the level of policy making is either international through multi country agreements on emission control or national when environmental policies are designed to control domestic pollution Many environmental problems however have a local or regional dimension Even when their dimension is global e g in the case of the greenhouse gas effect relevant decisions on emission control such as the adoption of energy saving utilities are taken at the local level In many countries the current legislation imposes the local authorities to prepare plans and adopt measures to control energy consumption or to reduce waste of natural resources It is therefore important to analyze the way in which local or regional authorities optimise their environmental management The Distributional Effects of Environmental Policy Johnstone Nick,Serret Ysé,2006-02-23

Environmental Dispute Resolution Lawrence S. Bacow, Michael Wheeler, 2013-06-29 This book has its origins in an MIT research project that was funded by the U S Environmental Protection Agency EPA Our immediate objective was to prepare a set of case studies that examined bargaining and negotiation as they occurred between government environmental advocates and regulatees throughout the traditional regulatory process. The project was part of a larger effort by the EPA to make environmental regulation more efficient and less litigious. The principal investigator for the research effort was Lawrence Suskind of the Department of Urban Studies and Planning. Eight case studies were prepared under the joint supervision of Suskind and the authors of this book. Studying the negotiating behavior of parties as we worked our way through an environmental dispute proved enlightening. We observed missed opportunities for settlement negotiating tactics that backfired and strategies that appeared to be grounded more in intuition than in thoughtful analysis. At the same time, however, we were struck by how often the parties ultimately managed to muddle through. People negotiated not out of some idealistic commitment to consensus but because they thought it better served their own interests. When some negotiations reached an impasse, people improvised mediation. These disputants succeeded in spite of legal and institutional barriers even though few of them had a sophisticated understanding of negotiation.

Water Governance as Connective Capacity Nanny Bressers, 2016-02-11 Water is becoming one of the world's most crucial concerns. A third of the world's population has severe water shortage while three quarters of the global population lives in deltas which run the risk of severe flooding. In addition, many more face problems of poor water quality. While it is apparent that drastic action should be taken, in reality water problems are complex and not at all easy to resolve. There are many stakeholders involved: industries, local municipalities, farmers, the recreational sector, environmental organisations, and others who all approach the problems and possible solutions differently. This requires delicate ways of governing multi-actor processes. This book approaches the concept of water management from an interdisciplinary and non-technical but governance orientation. It departs from the fragmented nature of water management, showing how these lack cooperation, joint responsibility, and integration, and instead argues that the capacity to connect to other domains, levels, scales, organizations, and actors is of utmost importance. Connective capacity revolves around connecting arrangements such as institutions, actors, for instance individuals and approaches such as instruments. These three carriers of connectedness can be applied to different focal points: the objects of fragmentation and integration in water management. The book distinguishes five different focal points: 1 government layers and levels, 2 sectors and domains, 3 time orientation of the long and the short term, 4 perceptions and actor frames, 5 public and private spheres. Each contributor pays attention to a specific combination of one focal point and one connective carrier. Bringing together case studies from countries including The Netherlands, United Kingdom, Romania, Sweden, Finland, Italy, India, Canada, and the United States, the book focuses on the question of how to deal with the various sources of fragmentation in water governance by organizing meaningful connections and developing connective capacity. In doing so, it provides useful scientific and practical insights into how connective capacity in water governance can be enhanced.
