The Guardians of the Cludgie Stane Andrew David Doyle, 2018-06-13 The guardians of the Stone of Destiny through the lineage of time have protected this ancient holy relic up into modern times From the stones introduction to human society to as far as ancient Egypt under the protection and stewardship of Princess Scota daughter of Nefertiti and sister of Tutankhamun the relic has traveled through many countries such as the Iberian Peninsula and Ireland eventually coming to rest in Argyll Scotland where the Scots and Irish had adopted her name for their tribes and succession Through the course of this guardianship the relic was eventually placed with the Knights Templar Holy Order of Scotland and overseen by the Earl of Fife where we know that through the warring years known better by the scholars as the Hammer of the Scots and the year 1296 specifically where Edward Longshanks had raided Scotland in order to acquire this important relic However if true history is to be known we may find that all was not as Edward had planned and having returned to Scotland for a period covering seven years or so King Longshanks was still not convinced that he had succeeded in his mission and eventually died near Lindisfarne before discovering the truth As we move into modern times we may discover that the guardians may have misplaced the holy relic during their tenure and the stone was secreted in various locations through the centuries across Scotland including the River Tay near Dundee and Dunsinane Castle near Scone the disputed home of King MacBeth and his wife Gruogh In the account that is portrayed within this narrative we may find that the relic has been on occasions vulnerable and the guardians are pitched against an unknown enemy from within once more as they endeavor to save the stone from modern day scientific study methods that could destroy the relic for eternity All Our Yesterdays Joel H.
