and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, 2001-01-19 What can social science and demography in particular reasonably expect to learn from biological information There is increasing pressure for multipurpose household surveys to collect biological data along with the more familiar interviewer respondent information Given that recent technical developments have made it more feasible to collect biological information in non clinical settings those who fund design and analyze survey data need to think through the rationale and potential consequences This is a concern that transcends national boundaries Cells and Surveys addresses issues such as which biologic genetic data should be collected in order to be most useful to a range of social scientists and whether amassing biological data has unintended side effects The book also takes a look at the various ethical and legal concerns that such data collection entails

Research Involving Human Biological Materials: Commissioned papers. Privacy and the analysis of stored tissues, 1999 Genetic Databases

Oonagh Corrigan, Richard Tutton, 2004 Genetic Databases offers a timely analysis of the underlying tensions contradictions and limitations of the current regulatory frameworks for and policy debates about genetic databases Drawing on original empirical research and theoretical debates in the fields of sociology anthropology and legal studies the contributors to this book challenge the prevailing orthodoxy of informed consent and explore the relationship between personal privacy and the public good They also consider the multiple meanings attached to human tissue and the role of public consultations and commercial involvement in the creation and use of genetic databases The authors argue that policy and regulatory frameworks produce a representation of participation that is often at odds with the experiences and understandings of those taking part The findings present a serious challenge for public policy to provide mechanisms to safeguard the welfare of individuals participating in genetic databases Tissue Economies Cathy Waldby, Robert Mitchell, 2006-03-20 DIVA cultural studies account of how the bio value of blood stem cells organs and cell lines moves back and forth between gift and commodity div
