Making Space for Science Jon Agar, Crosbie Smith, 2016-01-06 In recent years there has been a growing recognition that a mature analysis of scientific and technological activity requires an understanding of its spatial contexts Without these contexts indeed scientific practice as such is scarcely conceivable Making Space for Science brings together contributors with diverse interests in the history sociology and cultural studies of science and technology since the Renaissance The editors aim to provide a series of studies drawn from the history of science and engineering from sociology and sociology and science from literature and science and from architecture and design history which examine the spatial foundations of the sciences from a number of complementary perspectives A History of the Warfare of Science with Theology in

Topham, 2020-03-02 Periodicals played a vital role in the developments in science and medicine that transformed nineteenth century Britain Proliferating from a mere handful to many hundreds of titles they catered to audiences ranging from gentlemanly members of metropolitan societies to working class participants in local natural history clubs In addition to disseminating authorized scientific discovery they fostered a sense of collective identity among their geographically dispersed and often socially disparate readers by facilitating the reciprocal interchange of ideas and information As such they offer privileged access into the workings of scientific communities in the period The essays in this volume set the historical exploration of the scientific and medical periodicals of the era on a new footing examining their precise function and role in the making of nineteenth century science and enhancing our vision of the shifting communities and practices of science in the period This radical rethinking of the scientific journal offers a new approach to the reconfiguration of the sciences in nineteenth century Britain and sheds instructive light on contemporary debates about the purpose practices and price of scientific journals
