

DIALECTICS IN DBT

Dialectics is the idea that the truth lies somewhere between opposing views.

The Dialectical process entails seeking truth through reasoned discourse (versus stubbornness and emotional argument).

We are being dialectical when we are genuinely exploring the ground between opposing ideas or points of view. A dialectic is a position that is a synthesis of two opposing views. Reaching a dialectic can help alleviate tension. Dissonance is when opposing views cannot be brought together and tends to prolong states of tension.

Dialectical Behavioural Therapy (DBT) was developed to help address the deep internal tensions and conflicts that occur in people with Borderline Personality Disorder. The dialectical process helps to alleviate inner tension. It has transpired that DBT is useful in many other situations of tension, such as Complex Trauma, PTSD, and anxiety.

Dialectics is most useful in therapy when applied to black-and-white thinking. Sometimes people can get caught in a pendulum swing, shifting from one extreme to another. Dialectical thinking can help a person to find the middle ground or the grey area to see that they do not need to pick one or the other. Often they can choose or balance both.

Extreme Thinking

I can't handle my emotions. They are too intense so I need to numb myself.

Now I feel too numb and empty. I need to feel something again.

I have a new partner and they are the most amazing person in the world.

They said something invalidating and now they are dead to me.

If someone doesn't agree with my point of view then we can never be friends.

I must always agree with others or I will be alone forever.

Dialectical Thinking

I can regulate my emotions by imagining that I have a volume control dial rather than an on/off switch. I can tolerate feeling some of my emotions now AND then soothe or distract myself when they start to feel too big so I'm not overwhelmed.

Sometimes people will say things that are invalidating without realising it. I can use my DEARMAN skills to explain how their comment made me feel AND give them a chance to explain themselves so we can repair the relationship.

I am allowed to share my opinions, even if they differ from others and this won't mean that they will abandon me. Others can have different opinions from me AND we can still be friends. We can agree to disagree on some topics.
