

Social Anthropology, Peasantry, and Agricultural System Analysis

Jean-Pierre Olivier de Sardan

In social anthropology, agricultural production systems are inextricably embedded in the peasant world with its economic, social, political, and cultural factors.<sup>1</sup> The peasant world and its parts are much less "systemic" than true agro-pastoral production systems; we will discuss this later. In other words, an agricultural or agro-pastoral system of production is embedded within a larger, and more complex, diverse, and changing set of practices, institutions, controls and representations, which for convenience we can refer to with the term "peasant". Ironically, however, classic anthropological tradition makes little use of this term although the majority of the people studied by anthropologists are clearly peasants and not "primitive peoples".

It is generally accepted that the peasant world is characterized by its relative autonomy as contrasted with the main socio-economic structures to which it belongs (feudal, tributary, state, colonial, capitalist, socialist, etc.). These various powers took advantage of the peasantry using political means to impose, and often still do impose, tributes or "levies" under the guise of "paybacks" that varied in substance as well as in effectiveness (religious or military protection, security, development, etc.). Other characteristics were added in order to create a sort of "ideal type" of peasantry (Mendras, 1976):

- the household is the main structure of production and the family is the dominant mode of social organization,
- agriculture (associated in various ways with cattle farming and artisan work according to the context) places a definite importance on the relationship with the land (whether it is economic and patrimonial or symbolic and religious),
- peasant societies are "face to face" societies (Maquet, 1962) where the relationships are multiplex (i.e., people are simultaneously united on different levels—family, neighborhood relationships, participation in joint activities, etc.); the village is the most widespread example of this,
- "prominent citizens" provide decisive mediation between the peasant community and the surrounding society.

These characteristics of classic western peasantry can easily be applied to the majority of the contemporary rural societies in the Third World. In the North, in fact, the "end of peasantry" has long been discussed (Mendras, 1984). In the South, however, peasantry remains the dominant social structure for agricultural production, although ties with the surrounding society have been greatly modified. The link with the world economy (Smith & Wallerstein, 1992) suggests there are now new types of extortion or even an inverse flow of "assistance".

For those who conduct studies in terms of extortion, these are now passed through economic channels (issue of "unequal exchange": cf. Emmanuel, 1972). However, in a number of Third World countries, particularly in Africa, the deterioration of conditions for production and the decay of the State are such that foreign aid has become a central factor in the rural landscape. In these circumstances, it is difficult to speak of extorting the peasantry, and the flow seems to be partly reversed. It can even be referred to as "development rent". Several agricultural production systems in Africa can be studied only by taking into account the role that this rent<sup>2</sup> plays.

In a general sense, the "autonomy" of these peasant societies in the South must increasingly be questioned. At a time when peasantry in the North is disappearing, urbanization and the very rapid growth of the under-class in Third World cities as well as the numerous ties between the rural and urban worlds, due in particular to migrations (not to speak of the new phenomenon of "returning to

Social Anthropology of Peasantry Joan P. Mencher, 1983      Reconceptualizing The Peasantry Michael Kearney, 2018-02-07 The concept of peasant has been constructed from residual images of pre industrial European and colonial rural society Spurred by Romantic sensibilities and modern nationalist imaginations the images the word peasant brings to mind are anachronisms that do not reflect the ways in which rural people live today In this path breaking book Michael Kearney shows how the concept has been outdistanced by contemporary history He situates the peasantry within the current social context of the transnational and post Cold War nation state and clears the way for alternative theoretical views Reconceptualizing the Peasantry looks at rural society in general and considers the problematic distinction between rural and urban Most definitions of and debates about peasants have focused on their presumed social economic cultural and political characteristics but Kearney articulates the way in which peasants define themselves in a rapidly changing world In the process he develops ethnographic and political forms of representation that correspond to contemporary postpeasant identities Moving beyond a reconsideration of peasantry the book situates anthropology in global context showing how the discipline reconstructs itself and its subjects according to changing circumstances      Peasant History of Late Pre-colonial and Colonial India B. Evans,W. R. Lee,2015-06-03 This book first published in 1986 surveys the history of rural society in Germany from the eighteenth century to the present day The contributions include studies of Junker estates and small farming communities serfs and landless labourers maidservants and worker peasants They demonstrate the variety and complexity of the social division that structures the rural economy Throughout the book there is an emphasis on the conflicts that divided rural society and the ways and means in which these were expressed whether in serf strikes in eighteenth century Brandenburg village gossip in early twentieth century Hesse or factional struggles over planning permission in present day Swabia The rural world emerges not as traditional passive and undifferentiated but as actively participating in its own making not only responding to the changes going on around it but exploiting them for its own purposes and influencing them in its own way This book is ideal for students of history particularly German history      The Peasant Economy and Social Change in North China Philip Huang,1985-06-01 The author presents a convincing new interpretation of the origins and nature of the agrarian crisis that gripped the North China Plain in the two centuries before the Revolution His extensive research included eighteenth century homicide case records a nineteenth century country government archive large quantities of 1930 s Japanese ethnographic materials and his own field studies in 1980 Through a comparison of the histories of small family farms and larger scale managerial farms the author documents and illustrates the long term trends of agricultural commercialization social stratification and mounting population pressure in the peasant economy He shows how those changes in the absence of dynamic economic growth combined over the course of several centuries to produce a majority not simply of land short peasants or of exploited tenants and agricultural laborers but of poor peasants who required both family farming and agricultural wage income to survive This interlocking of family farming with wage labor furnished a large supply of cheap labor which in turn acted as a powerful brake of capital accumulation in the economy The formation of such a poor peasantry ultimately altered both the nature of village communities and their relations with the elites and the state creating tensions that led in the end to revolution      The Peasant Marketing System of Oaxaca, Mexico Ralph L. The Laissez-Faire Peasant Jovana Diković, 2025-01-14 In rural development studies there are two mainstream assumptions One holds that peasants are the victims of state rural development schemes the other that only planning can ensure change and prosperity in rural regions It is rarely considered that peasants are architects of their own and local wellbeing notions which are often in opposition to state plans for agriculture The Laissez Faire Peasant explores how rural development emerges on the ground The concept involves the manifestation of peasant worldviews in which autonomy in decision making freedom of action spontaneity and flexibility in everyday cooperation play a dominant role A role in which individual and local values generate a self regulating system that manages a range of economic social and political relationships The book examines manifestations of peasant autonomy both in response to and independent of state rural development policies through a multi sited ethnography of three Serbian villages It is shown how these factors impede state programs for rural development while enabling the spontaneous flourishing of local communities By focusing on the agency of rural residents the book finds that peasants are resilient and competent agents who do not need government plans to thrive Praise for The Laissez Faire Peasant Anthropologists and missionaries claim to love their peasants Economists and planners claim to help them Both look down Diković brilliantly proposes a new approach which might be called humanomics It gives respect looking up from where people actually live Deirdre Nansen McCloskey University of Illinois at Chicago This is an ethnographically rich and conceptually original study of post socialist peasantry and rural development in Serbia Jovana Diković draws a complex picture of the post socialist peasants as autonomous and resilient subjects motivated by the visions of rural development anchored in their local lifeworlds Agnieszka Joniak L thi University of Fribourg In her excellent study Jovana Diković challenges the narrative about Serbian peasants usually viewed as downtrodden and exploited underdogs in need of governmental help In this careful case

Yamey, 2017-07-12 Contemporary problems of economic and social change have obliged social scientists from different fields to learn much about each others work as well as about the specific problems they are together seeking to solve The bearing of economic conditions on the character of a social system has become more apparent to anthropologists and similarly economists have become more aware of the relevance of social factors to economic decisions This pioneering book is at the point of contact between these two disciplines presenting detailed studies from many societies of the interaction between social and economic relationships The studies in this volume all by social anthropologists focus on the formation and management of capital since this process is central to the economic functioning and growth of all societies With this central theme the essays cover a very wide geographic range and an equally wide range of social and economic structures The book begins with an essay by Firth who provides an extended outline discussion of the main problems and issues to be covered and ends with an essay by Yamey who provides summarizing comments and queries The volume will be especially useful to those concerned with the problems and prospects of economic and social change in underdeveloped areas in addition to economists and anthropologists concerned with what each can learn from the other     Framing Social Criticism in the Jesus Movement
