

The Copenhagen gasworks built 1861-1873. Designed: Ferdinand Mønstgaard

Town planning along Continental lines

The volume of new building construction work continued during the 1860's - notably since burning buildings on the "Old Street" - was and still is encompassed in the history of the City. There were several reasons behind this expansion. The most important of these was the growth of industrialisation which was accompanied by a rapidly increasing influx of people into the City. During this decade the population increased from 48,000 to 60,000, the largest increase in New Haven's history.

Room for growth

Between 1850-60 the new town plan for the "Malmøen" were approved. Lindgreen's model of boulevard system had provided the central part of the City with room to grow in. Everything was now ready for the rapid transformation which, in particular, was to characterise the old Langelinieboulevard area - from 1860 onwards called Christianshavn - where the first new boulevard were laid out. Along these, and in the inner part of the area and in districts such as north Malmø and Nørrebro, a great number of multi-family housing buildings were built during these few years. The new Building By-Law's and Building Ordinance's strictly regulated every width and length of buildings around a central urban street measurements with a focus of planned architecture in a rich neo-Renaissance style. The City authorities experienced that the approved plan was adapted when the actual construction work was in the hands of individual building contractors. The work was frequently of a purely speculative nature in order to achieve quick profits.

The original Copenhagen urban plan, modelled from Copenhagen for Malmø 1860-1870.
