Deathworld Harry Harrison,2012-06 Kill or be killed The trilogy is one of Harrisons best machinegun typewriter books by far The opening premise of the first novel is that Deathworld is a jungle planet teeming with life that evolves with a speed and ferocity unlike any other planet in the universe To survive for even a moment on the surface you must be superbly trained and superbly armed and prepared to kill hordes of clever and supremely deadly predators And then you need to figure out how to get work done in the meanwhile And obviously people with the skills needed to survive on Deathworld might find work elsewhere in sequels perhaps Terrific non stop action Grab this one its a True Si Fi Classic Composed before the PC era of Mr Harrison when no one dies and all good people fight for equality and social justice it concerns the ultimate expression of darwinism on a planetary scale A race of people whose homeland is literally evolving to kill them will of need themselves evolve to become the most lethal race of men in the galaxy Ok so Dune was first Sarcasm wit and action ballanced with just the right level of homicidal fever and hair splitting suspense A true 70s must read This book is a classic the main character Jason dinAlt is a gambler and a scoundrel with an ability to influence luck in his favor Hes recruited to help raise money for the inhabitants of Pyrrus and has to follow the girl sent to arrange the deal to see the place for himself I refer to Deathworld and the others in the trilogy everytime someone asks me to recommend a SF classic Imagine a planet where the grass has curved needle sharp tips you sit on a rock and the lichen tries to get you all the animals have one thing in common kill the human invaders Imagine that to survive you need to attend a pre school for colonists and your survival skills never extend beyond first grade This is Deathworld If you never read another SF at least read his finest Deathworld
