Merrick,2020-08-05 Reproduction of the original Old Times in Dixie Land by Caroline E Merrick      Playboy ,1963      Gifts Given Doug Davis,2012-01-12 On August 27 1956 in Clinton Tennessee twelve African American students made history when they were the first to walk through the doors of a legally desegregated high school On that day integration in the South formally moved from the courtroom to the classroom Author Doug Davis was a frontline witness to history His mother was an English teacher at the high school and his father was a lawyer in the initial court case Although school opened with minimal disruption the first week ended with tanks rolling into town to keep order Later when the parents of the black students were reluctant to send their children to school the authors father was one of three who escorted the students through a gauntlet of angry racists that had gathered in protest Davis was just eight when this happened and the memories of those tense days were the inspiration for this story The conflict followed the family home and included the burning of a cross in their front yard The family members were eyewitnesses to their hometowns turmoil conflict that escalated from riots and protests culminating in the destruction of the high school with one hundred sticks of dynamite. The people of this ruptured community bore the brunt of this momentous era of societal change in America. Here childhood memories of family and community shed their light on the story.

"The Evolution of Jazz in Britain, 1880-1935" Catherine Tackley (n? Parsonage), 2017-07-05 As a popular music the evolution of jazz is tied to the contemporary sociological situation. Jazz was brought from America into a very different environment in Britain and resulted in the establishment of parallel worlds of jazz by the end of the 1920s within the realms of institutionalized culture and within the subversive underworld. Tackley n Parsonage demonstrates the importance of image and racial stereotyping in shaping perceptions of jazz and leads to the significant conclusion that the evolution of jazz in Britain was so much more than merely an extension or reflection of that in America. The book examines the cultural and musical antecedents of the genre including minstrel shows and black musical theatre within the context of musical life in Britain in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Tackley is particularly concerned with the public perception of jazz in Britain and provides close analysis of the early European critical writing on the subject. The processes through which an evolution took place are considered by looking at the methods of introducing jazz in Britain through imported revue shows sheet music and visits by American musicians. Subsequent developments are analysed through the consideration of modernism and the Jazz Age as theoretical constructs and through the detailed study of dance music on the BBC and jazz in the underworld of London. The book concludes in the 1930s by which time the availability of records enabled the spread of hot music affecting the live repertoire in Britain Tackley therefore sheds entirely new light on the development of jazz in Britain and provides a deep social and cultural understanding of the early history of the genre
