Chemical-Mechanical Planarization of Semiconductor Materials M.R. Oliver,2013-03-14 Chemical Mechanical Planarization CMP has emerged in the last two decades and grown rapidly as a basic technology widely used in semiconductor device fabrication As a semiconductor processing step it was developed at IBM in the mid 1980s From this beginning the technology has been widely adopted throughout the semiconductor industry As basic CMP technology has been understood and accepted throughout the semiconductor industry its uses in different parts of the semiconductor process have multiplied This includes special steps for some special process ing flows such as for DRAM technology In addition the availability of CMP technology has enabled the implementation of new technologies with the best example being copper interconnect technology Copper could not be practically implemented into semiconductor process flows until the advent of CMP. Unfortunately the rapid acceptance and implementation of CMP technology in wafer fabrication has occurred without a corresponding rate of advance in the underlying science. Progress is being made in understanding the underlying CMP mechanisms but in general it is slow and uneven. The most noteworthy exception to this trend is the science of metal CMP reactions where the scientific understanding is actually driving much of the advance of the technology. There has been no corresponding progress in other CMP areas however.

Homiletic Review
,1929 Metropolitan Pulpit and Homiletic Monthly ,1929 War and Worship Susan Möller-Wiering, 2011-08-30. War and Worship concerns textile deposits from the bog sites of Thorsberg in Germany and Nydam Vimose and Illerup däl in Denmark. All four sites are well known for containing a substantial amount of archaeological materials particularly weapons but they also contain as integral parts of the weapon deposits a smaller number of preserved textiles which nevertheless constitute outstanding assemblages. With the exception of Thorsberg publications dealing particularly with textiles from weapon deposits are almost non-existent. The textiles from each site are analysed then compared to one another and described as a unit characterising the particular site. Comparisons are then made between the four sites with emphasis on the overall context. A final chapter by Lise R. der Knudsen analyses tablet woven textiles in the deposits a textile technique used to make bands edges and borders. Although the state of preservation of the textiles at the different locations varies hugely the research has extracted a large amount of information allowing conclusions on status origin function and role in the deposits to be drawn. The fabrics presented here were unquestionably consecrated textiles. They had been worn by the defeated foreign warriors during the battle and were considered worthy as sacrificial offerings to the gods Some individual high status textiles were perceived to have a value comparable to certain metal items Others probably the majority were used for covering and wrapping other offerings for the subsequent sacrifice All were committed to the lakes in a sacred act of remembrance to celebrate victorious battles *Catalog of Copyright Entries.
