The Quality of the Archaeological Record Charles Perreault, 2019-09-16 Paleobiology struggled for decades to influence our understanding of evolution and the history of life because it was stymied by a focus on microevolution and an incredibly patchy fossil record But in the 1970s the field took a radical turn as paleobiologists began to investigate processes that could only be recognized in the fossil record across larger scales of time and space That turn led to a new wave of macroevolutionary investigations novel insights into the evolution of species and a growing prominence for the field among the biological sciences In The Quality of the Archaeological Record Charles Perreault shows that archaeology not only faces a parallel problem but may also find a model in the rise of paleobiology for a shift in the science and theory of the field To get there he proposes a more macroscale approach to making sense of the archaeological record an approach that reveals patterns and processes not visible within the span of a human lifetime but rather across an observation window thousands of years long and thousands of kilometers wide Just as with the fossil record the archaeological record has the scope necessary to detect macroscale cultural phenomena because it can provide samples that are large enough to cancel out the noise generated by micro scale events By recalibrating their research to the quality of the archaeological record and developing a true macroarchaeology program Perreault argues archaeologists can finally unleash the full contributive value of their discipline

Rock, Bone, and Ruin Adrian Currie, 2024-05-21 An argument that we should be optimistic about the capacity of methodologically omnivorous geologists paleontologists and archaeologists to uncover truths about the deep past The historical sciences geology paleontology and archaeology have made extraordinary progress in advancing our understanding of the deep past How has this been possible given that the evidence they have to work with offers mere traces of the past In Rock Bone and Ruin Adrian Currie explains that these scientists are methodological omnivores with a variety of strategies and techniques at their disposal and that this gives us every reason to be optimistic about their capacity to uncover truths about prehistory Creative and opportunistic paleontologists for example discovered and described a new species of prehistoric duck billed platypus from a single fossilized tooth Examining the complex reasoning processes of historical science Currie also considers philosophical and scientific reflection on the relationship between past and present the nature of evidence contingency and scientific progress Currie draws on varied examples from across the historical sciences from Mayan ritual sacrifice to giant Mesozoic fleas to Mars's mysterious watery past to develop an account of the nature of and resources available to historical science He presents two major case studies the emerging explanation of sauropod size and the snowball earth hypothesis that accounts for signs of glaciation in Neoproterozoic tropics He develops the Ripple Model of Evidence to analyze unlucky circumstances in scientific investigation examines and refutes arguments for pessimism about the capacity of the historical sciences defending the role of analogy and arguing that simulations have an experiment like function Currie argues for a creative open ended approach empirically grounded speculation
