agreeable to his son to know some of the incidents of his father's life so with a week's uninterrupted leisure he is beginning to write them down for William. He starts with some anecdotes of his grandfather, uncles, father and mother. He deals with his childhood, his fondness for reading and his service as an apprentice to his brother James Franklin, a Boston printer and the publisher of the New England Courant. After improving his writing skills through study of the Spectator by Joseph Addison and Sir Richard Steele, he writes an anonymous paper and slips it under the door of the printing house by night. Not knowing its author, James and his friends praise the paper and it is published in the Courant, which encourages Ben to produce more essays, the Silence Dogood essays, which are also published. When Ben reveals his authorship, James is angered, thinking the recognition of his papers will make Ben too vain. James and Ben have frequent disputes and Ben seeks for a way to escape from working under James.

Why buy our paperbacks? Unabridged 100% Original content. Printed in USA on High Quality Paper. 30 Days Money Back Guarantee. Standard Font size of 10 for all books. Fulfilled by Amazon. Expedited shipping. BEWARE OF LOW QUALITY SELLERS. Don't buy cheap paperbacks just to save a few dollars. Most of them use low quality papers, however, Franklin himself appears to have called the work his Memoirs. Although it had a tortuous publication history after Franklin's death, this work has become one of the most famous and influential examples of an autobiography ever written. Franklin's account of his life is divided into four parts reflecting the different periods at which he wrote them. There are actual breaks in the narrative between the first three parts, but Part Three's narrative continues into Part Four without an authorial break, only an editorial one. Part One of the Autobiography is addressed to Franklin's son William at that time, 1771, Royal Governor of New Jersey. While in England at the estate of the Bishop of St Asaph in Twyford, Franklin, now 65 years old, begins by saying that it may be agreeable to his son to know some of the incidents of his father's life so with a week's uninterrupted leisure he is beginning to write them down for William. He starts with some anecdotes of his grandfather, uncles, father and mother. He deals with his childhood, his fondness for reading and his service as an apprentice to his brother James Franklin, a Boston printer and the publisher of the New England Courant. After improving his writing skills through study of the Spectator by Joseph Addison and Sir Richard Steele, he writes an anonymous paper and slips it under the door of the printing house by night. Not knowing its author, James and his friends praise the paper and it is published in the Courant, which encourages Ben to produce more essays, the Silence Dogood essays, which are also published. When Ben reveals his authorship, James is angered, thinking the recognition of his papers will make Ben too vain. James and Ben have frequent disputes and Ben seeks for a way to escape from working under James.

Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin Frank Woodworth Pine, Benjamin Franklin, 2016-03-14 Benjamin Franklin is the traditional name for the unfinished record of his own life written by Benjamin Franklin from 1771 to 1790 however Franklin himself appears to have called the work his Memoirs Benjamin Franklin had a tortuous publication history after Franklin's death this work has become one of the most famous and influential examples of an autobiography ever written In 1791 the first edition appeared in French rather than English as Mmoires de la vie priv e de Benjamin Franklin published in Paris This translation of Part One only was based on a flawed transcript made of Franklin's manuscript before he had revised it This French translation was then retranslated into English in two London publications of 1793 and one of the London editions served as a basis for a retranslation into French in 1798 in an edition which also included a fragment of Part Two The first three parts of the Autobiography were first published together in English by Franklin's grandson William Temple Franklin in London in 1818 in Volume 1 of Memoirs of the Life and Writings of Benjamin Franklin W T Franklin did not include Part Four because he had previously traded away the original holograph of the Autobiography for a copy that contained only the first three parts Furthermore he felt free to make unauthoritative stylistic revisions to his grandfather's autobiography and on occasion followed the translated and retranslated versions mentioned above rather than Ben Franklin's original text Benjamin Franklin text was the standard version of the Autobiography for half a century until John Bigelow purchased the original manuscript in France and in 1868 published the most reliable text that had yet appeared including the first English publication of Part Four In the 20th century important editions by Max Ferrand and the staff of the Huntington Library in San Marino California Benjamin Franklin's Memoirs Parallel Text Edition 1949 and by Leonard W Labaree 1964 as part of the Yale University Press edition of The Papers of Benjamin Franklin improved on Bigelow's accuracy In 1981 J A Leo Lemay and P M Zall produced The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin A Genetic Text attempting to show all revisions and cancellations in the holograph manuscript This the most accurate edition of all so far published served as a basis for
