

LAWYER vs. ATTORNEY

What's the Difference?

Lawyer

- General term for someone who practices law
- Can provide legal advice and represent clients in some legal matters
- Does not necessarily have to have a law degree
- Example: "I hired a lawyer to help me with my will."

Attorney

- More specific term for someone who represents clients in court
- Can represent clients in all legal matters, including court
- Must have a law degree and pass the bar exam
- Example: "My attorney represented me in court for my divorce."

Remember: "Lawyer" is a general term for someone who practices law and can provide legal advice, while "attorney" is a more specific term for someone who represents clients in court and must have a law degree and pass the bar exam.
