

CHRISTIAN MYSTICISM

by Ian Ellis-Jones

Salient Points of Addresses Delivered at the Sydney Unitarian Church on 3 June 2007 and 1 July 2007

1. Mysticism may be defined as the spirituality of the direct experience of God.

NOTES. Spirituality is a composite word referring to the "domain where mind, personality, purpose, ideals, values and meanings dwell" (Rabbi Mordecai Kaplan). Spirituality involves the longing to be connected with the largeness of life as well as to something larger than one's ego-self, in other words, a power-not-oneself.

Also, for the Christian mystic God is seen as an all-embracing love that unites the universe into one indivisible whole, the ground of all being, the being of all beings, Being Itself, our very essence, the oneness that unites everything.

2. Mysticism is not essentially about "mystical experiences" - experiences come and go - but is focused on the lasting experience of God, leading to the transformation of the believer into a transforming union with God. "In him we live, and move, and have our being We are his offspring" (Acts 17:28). Jesus proclaimed, "I and the Father are one" (Jn 10:30) showing the world what the union of God and man can be. It is also written, "There is one God who is father of all, over all, through all and within all" (Eph 4:6).
3. Mysticism is a vital part of the Christian heritage. Indeed, it is actually the core and spiritual essence of Christian spirituality. The direct experience of God is a transrational (but not necessarily "supernatural") kind of knowing, which goes beyond ordinary intellectual or rational understanding.
4. Christian mysticism is not a matter of "belief" or "emotional experience" (nor is it a psychological malady) but is a natural state nevertheless characterised by positive emotions and states of consciousness such as love and joy.
5. The Christian mystic looks within in order to have a relationship with God other than via priests and institutions. Saint Paul spoke of the goal and nature of mysticism and the mystical experience when he wrote, "For now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known" (1 Cor 13:12).
6. In the mystical experience the Christian mystic no longer experiences him/herself as a separate individual but rather as an expression of the Oneness of all Life. God, who is perceived as the only reality, is everything and does everything. Saint Paul achieved the divinized state of losing his "self": "I no longer live, but Christ lives in me!" (Gal 2:20).
