which certain aesthetic advancements initiated new forms of literary expression to posit a new genealogy of interdisciplinary practice in Britain At a time in which Britain became conscious of its evolving identity within an increasingly globalised context this study accounts for the range of Continental and Transatlantic influences in order to more accurately locate the networks at play Exploring the contributions made by individuals such as Herbert Read Ian Hamilton Finlay and Christine Brooke Rose as well as by groups of practitioners It brings a wide range of previously unexplored archival material into the public domain and offers a comprehensive account of the evolving status of abstraction across cultural institutional and literary contexts

Cold War Culture Jim Smyth, 2016-04-04 Britain in the 1950s had a distinctive political and intellectual climate It was the age of Keynesianism of welfare state consensus incipient consumerism and to its detractors the so called Angry Young Men and the emergent New Left a new age of complacency While Prime Minister Harold Macmillan famously remarked that most of our people have never had it so good the playwright John Osborne lamented that there aren't any good brave causes left Philosophers political scientists economists and historians embraced the supposed end of ideology and fetishized value free technique and analysis This turn is best understood in the context of the cultural Cold War in which ideology served as shorthand for Marxist but it also drew on the rich resources and traditions of English empiricism and a Burkean scepticism about abstract theory in general Ironically cultural critics and historians such as Raymond Williams and E P Thompson showed at this time that the thick catalogue of English moral aesthetic and social critique could also be put to altogether different purposes Jim Smyth here shows that despite being allergic to McCarthy style vulgarity British intellectuals in the 1950s operated within powerful Cold War paradigms all the same

State Sponsored Literature Asha Rogers, 2020 This book tells the timely and much needed story of the state's interest in supporting literary production in post war Britain Working with unexamined sources it charts the forgotten record of state sponsorship into conversation with Britain's transformation into a successful multicultural democracy
