

SHORTER NOTICES

A. P. M. Coxon, and C. L. Jones, The Images of Occupational Prestige: A Study in Social Cognition, London: Macmillan, 1978, £12.00, 226 pp.

This book is the first of a trilogy on the social meanings of occupations. In this volume Coxon and Jones restrict themselves to two major tasks. Firstly, they provide a review of existing sociological and social psychological analyses of the meanings given by members of societies to occupational roles and secondly, they provide their own data gathered in Edinburgh.

The first two chapters, which provide a critical review of previous attempts to investigate social prestige, will be of general interest to anyone concerned with the conceptual and empirical problems of this line of stratification research. The authors provide excellent summaries of, for example, the difficulties involved in the separation of evaluative and cognitive orientations in the responses given during prestige inquiries, the 'structuralist' versus 'culturalist' debate about the invariance of prestige rankings in complex industrial societies and the problems of unilinear scalings of the occupational structure of contemporary societies.

The main substantive material is contained in chapters three and four which deal with occupational cognition and occupational evaluation. In these sections there are provided a series of interesting and novel techniques of data analysis, but as a non-mathematician I found a lack of clarity in the explanation of the generation of some of the diagrams and the meanings of the techniques employed. It appears as if these points are to be dealt with in greater detail in volume three but Coxon and Jones's rationale for such a separation of analysis and methodology—'Most social scientists are not interested (and rightly so) in the full justification of methodological niceties—written for the benefit of the technical expert—and many readers do not need to know the full details of the data analysis.' (p. x)—seems bizarre in the face of a book whose precise significance is located in the inter-relationships of substantive problems and statistical techniques.

The cognitive material was based upon the technique of collecting similarities data on occupations by asking respondents to judge the similarity of pairs of occupations (e.g. policeman and carpenter). Occupational evaluations were determined by giving respondents a set of thirty-two cards upon each of which an occupation was printed and then asking them to categorize the cards into piles and, if desired, order the categories. Interestingly, only 32 out of 82 respondents performed the latter task, despite promptings. Of these 32, 34 used two categories, 1 used three and 4 used ten or more. The criteria given for these manoeuvres most often (12 respondents) was skill or training.

The entire project reported in the book is an example, according to the authors, of 'cognitive sociology'. However, when the premises of their arguments are examined they appear remarkably Parsonsonian. The emphasis on the theoretical importance of status and particularly of evaluation as the arena for stratification research is clearly structural-functionalist, yet it is never made explicit nor defended. The major problem of locating non-evaluative cognitive processes is never satisfactorily resolved by the authors. Nor is the argument that 'people's conceptions of the social structure in part determine it and in part are reports upon it' resolve the central problem, namely whether actors' explicit statements about the social hierarchy are either constitutive or exhaustive of that hierarchy. For example, Coxon and Jones

Bechhofer,B. Elliott,2016-04-30 Chicago Lawyers John P.

Heinz,Edward O. Laumann,1982-12-15 What determines the systematic allocation of status power and economic reward among lawyers What kind of social structure organizes lawyers roles in the bar and in the larger community As Heinz and Laumann convincingly demonstrate the legal profession is stratified primarily by the character of the clients served not by the type of legal service rendered In fact the distinction between corporate and individual clients divides the bar into two remarkably separate hemispheres Using data from extensive personal interviews with nearly 800 Chicago lawyers the authors show that lawyers who serve one type of client seldom serve the other Furthermore lawyers political ethno religious and social ties are very likely to correspond to those of their client types Greater deference is consistently shown to corporate lawyers who seem to acquire power by association with their powerful clients Heinz and Laumann also discover that these two hemispheres of the legal profession are not effectively integrated by intraprofessional organizations such as the bar courts or law schools The fact that the bar is structured primarily along extraprofessional lines raises intriguing questions about the law and the nature of professionalism questions addressed in a provocative and far ranging final chapter This volume published jointly with the American Bar Foundation offers a uniquely sophisticated and comprehensive analysis of lawyers professional lives It will be of exceptional importance to sociologists and others interested in the legal profession in the general study of professions and in social stratification and the distribution of power Skilled Workers in the Class

Structure Roger Penn,1984 Based on an investigation of trade union structures and the earnings and intermarriage of manual workers in the cotton and engineering industries in Rochdale between 1856 and 1964 Argues that an internal division of the manual working class around the axis of skill was a central feature of labour market and work relations in Britain between the mid nineteenth century and the mid 1960s Tourism Employment Michael Riley,Adele Ladkin,Edith Szivas,2002-02-12 This book is an attempt to understand tourism employment in a holistic way Using ideas from labour economics work psychology and industrial sociology the authors look at tourism employment in both its workplace context and its wider economic and social environment and attempt to tell a coherent story Both behavioural and economic perspectives are used to address questions that are salient to manpower planning education planning and tourism management By examining the diversity and commonality within occupations against the background of a dynamic labour market the text develops themes that contribute to our understanding of the behaviour of workers and managers in the industry

Mothers and Fathers Kathryn C. Backett, 1982-06-18 Applied Multidimensional Scaling and Unfolding Ingwer Borg, Patrick J.F. Groenen, Patrick Mair, 2018-05-16 This book introduces multidimensional scaling MDS and unfolding as data analysis techniques for applied researchers MDS is used for the analysis of proximity data on a set of objects representing the data as distances between points in a geometric space usually of two dimensions Unfolding is a related method that maps preference data typically evaluative ratings of different persons on a set of objects as distances between two sets of points representing the persons and the objects resp This second edition has been completely revised to reflect new developments and the coverage of unfolding has also been substantially expanded Intended for applied researchers whose main interests are in using these methods as tools for building substantive theories it discusses numerous applications classical and recent highlights practical issues such as evaluating model fit presents ways to enforce theoretical expectations for the scaling solutions and addresses the typical mistakes that MDS unfolding users tend to make Further it shows how MDS and unfolding can be used in practical research work primarily by using the smacof package in the R environment but also Proxscal in SPSS It is a valuable resource for psychologists social scientists and market researchers with a basic understanding of multivariate statistics such as multiple regression and factor analysis
