Architecture James FERGUSSON (Architect.), 1862     House Styles in America James C. Massey, Shirley Maxwell, 1996 This is a book about American house styles and they are discussed in twenty one chapters and illustrated with over 200 color plates and line drawings Neither a comprehensive history of American residential architecture nor a compendium of America's greatest houses this fascinating and useful book looks instead at broad trends in domestic building from the first days of European settlement on this continent through the Great Depression and beyond from saltboxes to split levels There are certainly mansions to be found here for they help to define certain styles Yet the chief focus is not on grand houses but on typical ones examples that capture the essence of the everyday rather than the extraordinary BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved     An Attempt to Discriminate the Styles of Architecture in England, from the Conquest to the Reformation Thomas Rickman, 1881     In what Style Should We Build? Heinrich Hübsch, 1992 In 1828 a young architect Heinrich Hübsch published a polemical study in which he suggested that the rapid technological progress of the early nineteenth century combined with changed living habits had rendered the Greek Neoclassical style unsuitable for present needs or future development The intriguing title of his book In What Style Should We Build even more than its provocative argument touched off a dispute among architects that filled the pages of the newly founded journals of the 1830s and 1840s The theme of this often animated discussion hastened by the burst of historical knowledge was the choice of a style that is the determination of the premises from which a future and culturally appropriate style might be engendered By mid century however the confident expectation of bringing the search to a conclusion began to wane Now historicism plurality of styles and eclecticism were becoming dominant factors in architecture Evidently the debate had failed in its prime objective and yet it had set in motion intellectual forces that from our present perspective appear to have instituted a new nineteenth century style The Texts Documents series offers to the student of art architecture and aesthetics neglected forgotten or unavailable writings in English translation Edited according to modern standards of scholarship and framed by critical introductions and commentaries these volumes gradually mine the past centuries for studies that retain their significance in our understanding of art and of the issues surrounding its production reception and interpretation Eminent scholars assist in the selection and publication of volumes in the Texts Documents series Each volume acquaints readers with the broader cultural conditions at the genesis of the text and equips them with the needed apparatus for its study Over time the series will greatly expand our horizon and deepen our understanding of critical thinking on art
