Leading the 21st-Century Academic Library Bradford Lee Eden, 2015-03-02 Libraries of all types have undergone significant developments in the last few decades The rate of change in the academic library a presence for decades now has been increasing in the first decade of this century It is no exaggeration to claim that it is undergoing a top to bottom redefinition Cataloging and reference remain central to its new role and the circulation of books is still high though declining Among the changes is the architecture of the library when new libraries replace old or where renovation is occurring the role of technology at every stage and in every library application the management of serials selection shelving and budgeting and in a gradual but irrevocable move to digital forms altered allocation of resources including larger portions of the budget diverted to preservation not only of aging books a theme in the latter part of the last century but of digital files cultural historical personal In brief the academic library is dramatically different today than it was only ten years ago And with it the profession of the academic librarian is also undergoing significant changes Managing digital resources in all its forms from telecommunications to storage and access devices is central to its new roles Creating curating and preserving digital information is also key to the new librarianship And what about services to its clients Here also we see dramatic change particularly but not exclusively with guiding library users in the effective use of networked knowledge Information literacy is a key term and skill in using the new tools of digital literacy reading and writing searching and extracting and the new technologies that drive social networking the Iphone Ipad and Ipod and its many imitators We can't expect the redefined academic library to assume its final shape any time soon if ever but the transformation is well underway This series Creating the 21st Century Academic Library will explore this topic from a number of different perspectives Volume 1 Visionary Leadership and Futures will begin the discussion by examining some of the new roles and directions academic libraries are taking

Rhetoric and the Arts of Design David S. Kaufer, Brian S. Butler, 2013-11-26 The design arts from the design of buildings and machines to software and interfaces are associated with types of knowledge and performance thought to be structured modular and systematic Such arts have become increasingly prestigious in our technocratic society Since Aristotle the art of rhetoric was conceived as a loosely structured practical art thought to be limited in the extent to which it could mimic more precise subject matters The art of rhetoric has been controversial since classical times but its status has sunk even lower since the industrial revolution a point when civic cultures began to cede authority and control to the cultures of specialized experts Many sympathizers of rhetoric have resisted its decline by calling for a civic art of public discourse to stand in opposition to a technocratic specialized discourse that has come increasingly to disenfranchise the ordinary citizen. This is the first book to question the rhetoric technical knowledge split from a more fundamental perspective. To get some perspective on what is at stake in rhetoric's traditional classification as a practical art, the authors explore the distinction between practical and design arts, enumerate the various criteria cited in the literature for qualifying a cluster of knowledge and performative skills to count as an art of design, show how the knowledge and performative skills associated with the art of rhetoric meet the major requirements of design knowledge, propose a general architecture of rhetorical design, one descriptive both of civic address and specialized academic argument, turn to the Lincoln-Douglas debates to embody and provide some empirical support and illustration for their architecture, demonstrate how Lincoln and Douglas can be thought of as expert designers whose rhetoric is highly structured and modular, and explain how the rhetoric of both rhetorical agents can be represented in the layers and modules that one needs to display plans for buildings, software, or other design artifacts. These layers and modules are not just post hoc annotations of the debates; they also illuminate new and systematic ways for viewing the debates and, by implication, other specimens of rhetoric in terms of strategies of artistic production. Kaufer and Butler conclude their presentation by citing some of the research and educational implications that follow from housing rhetoric within the family of design arts.

Design Computing Brian Johnson, 2016-11-18 Design Computing will help you understand the rapidly evolving relationship between computing, designers, and the many different environments they create or work in. The book introduces the topic of design computing and covers the basics of hardware and software so you don't need to be an expert. Topics include the fundamentals of digital representation, programming, and interfaces for design; the shifting landscape of opportunity and expectation in practice and pedagogy; placing sensors in buildings to measure performance and the challenge of applying information effectively in design. The book also includes additional reading for those who wish to dig deeper into the subject. Design Computing will provide you with a greater awareness of the issues that permeate the field, opportunities for you to investigate, and perhaps motivation to push the boundaries.

Maturing Megacities Uwe Altröck, Sonia Schoon, 2013-08-19 This edited volume covers the multiple changes concerning urban governance in the course of the progressive transformation of the Pearl River Delta mega urban region in China. Looking at the megacities Guangzhou and Shenzhen, it analyzes the maturing of socio-economic, political, and spatial structures after the first waves of economic globalization, political transformation, and their rapid expansion and urbanization. The initial claim and starting point of the book is the existence of a profound multidimensional shift in the coastal mega urban region with a major tendency towards urban upgrading, economic restructuring, and a clearly observable consolidation of political institutions. For the first time since the beginning of the reform and opening up after 1978, this has led to a stronger bias toward urban regeneration and adaptive re use of the building stock and an establishment of post industrial knowledge based creative industries The book investigates these changes as a set of mutually dependent developments that have to be understood and analyzed in connection with one another Thus the backgrounds and underlying forces that shape physical restructuring in the developed urban cores of the mega urban region and the ways in which the relevant actors and institutions are trying to both cope with and to influence each other are introduced here
